This is a high school.
It is one of the largest in the nation.
For some reason,
it is called
Lyons Township High School.
For other reasons,
five thousand different reasons,
over five thousand students
attend every day;
they shuffle in and out,
and somewhere in between
they receive a diploma
and an education.
Five thousand
trying to grow up,
trying to learn,
trying to find something
that they can believe,
that they can know.
Five thousand
trying to find themselves.

Five thousand different people walk into this school
 each morning,
 arriving by bus or car,
 on foot or train,
 from all over the township.
 By free will or force,
 they gather here every day
 and leave together every night.

The empty halls and rooms fill for seven hours,
and people leave behind them
used paper and scribblings,
tracked mud and bits of food;
and logic and art.
And a temporary stillness.

It is often hard to think of yourself
as part of the crowd;
but like one atom
of one molecule
of one grain of sand
of one desert,
you are part of the crowd,
part of the feelings and thoughts
that make up a crowd.
Like the atom,
you may appear slight,
but the crowd would be less
without you.
Any crowd, thrown together,
gathers for reasons that differ
from person to person,
but all reasons leading you
to the same place and time,
all of them leading to the same crowd.

The routine of every day,
the steps that you go through
year after year,
the place that fate
has put you in,
that you are powerless
to control:
these are the things
that you wish you could change,
but you can't get started in saying what should replace them.
Change is slow
because it is so uncertain,
but this year saw
a student lounge,
the end of the dress code,
and other changes in the system that perplexes us —
small changes, but they are something.

Learning should be the main purpose of any school. It is a state of constant growth and change; it is the testing of ideas. Because learning is constant exploration and questioning, inert stability cannot be the goal of education. When movement stops and the institution refuses to budge, the school is in trouble. The school's structure must be flexible enough to allow teachers and students to explore new ways of learning.

Students are expected to adapt themselves completely to a structure established years before they arrived and which will probably not change during their school years. So far, our school's structure has not been flexible enough to allow change that is long overdue. Student Council can do no more than recommend change to the administration. It can make no final decision.

Because learning cannot occur within a vacuum, there must be constant communication among all students and teachers. Things such as open assemblies and student-run newspapers are necessary to keep the school from dying in silent apathy, to keep learning alive. The school is faced with countless regulations to enforce and policies to defend. The administration can become afraid of dissent if it thinks that students have little constructive criticism and only want to tear down the school brick by brick. Because there seems to be little faith in the students' real concern for the school, students are not allowed nearly enough of an opportunity to improve it. Because bureaucracy threatens to stifle learning, the school is now faced with a crisis: whether it will continue to keep the enormous machine running unchanged or come to terms with the growing stress in the school, having more faith in the students to act intelligently.

— Phillip Bennett in the October 8 issue of The Gnu Review

You become disgusted
when things just don't go
the way you want them to,
and there's nothing you can do
to change things
except voice your opinion;
whether that helps or not,
at least it helps relieve you.

Dissent is necessary
to keep the leaders aware,
to point out faults,
and to suggest improvements.

One voice out of a crowd
is not enough
to move the crowd,
to change crowd feelings,
but a united crowd
brings necessary changes.

The atmosphere of a crowd
can provoke high spirits,
good times, companionship,
and the inspired laughs
that draw a crowd together,
and that can distinguish you
from others in the crowd
and to the other people in the crowd.

It is natural to drift
to a group sharing
interests or backgrounds.
You are identified
by your friends,
by the things that
your group represents;
The group is the basic social unit here;
that is also natural.
But you need more,
in both directions;
you need to belong
to a bigger group,
and you need to be
yourself.

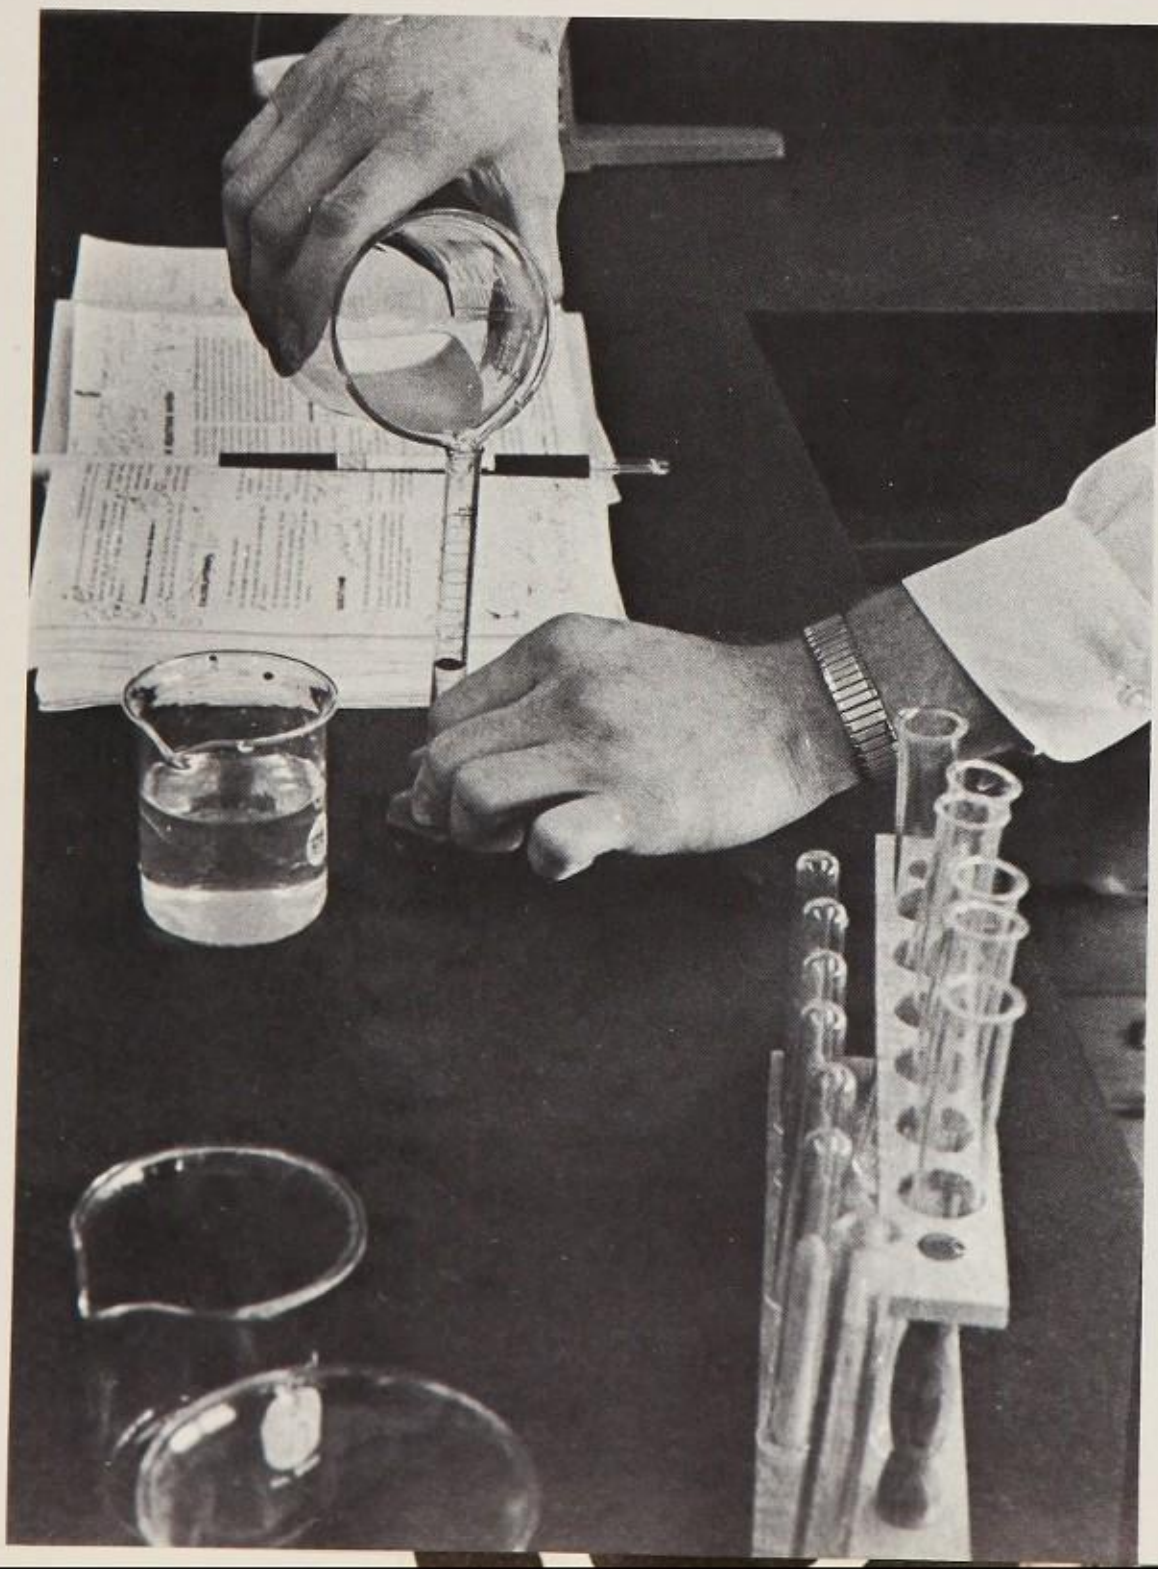

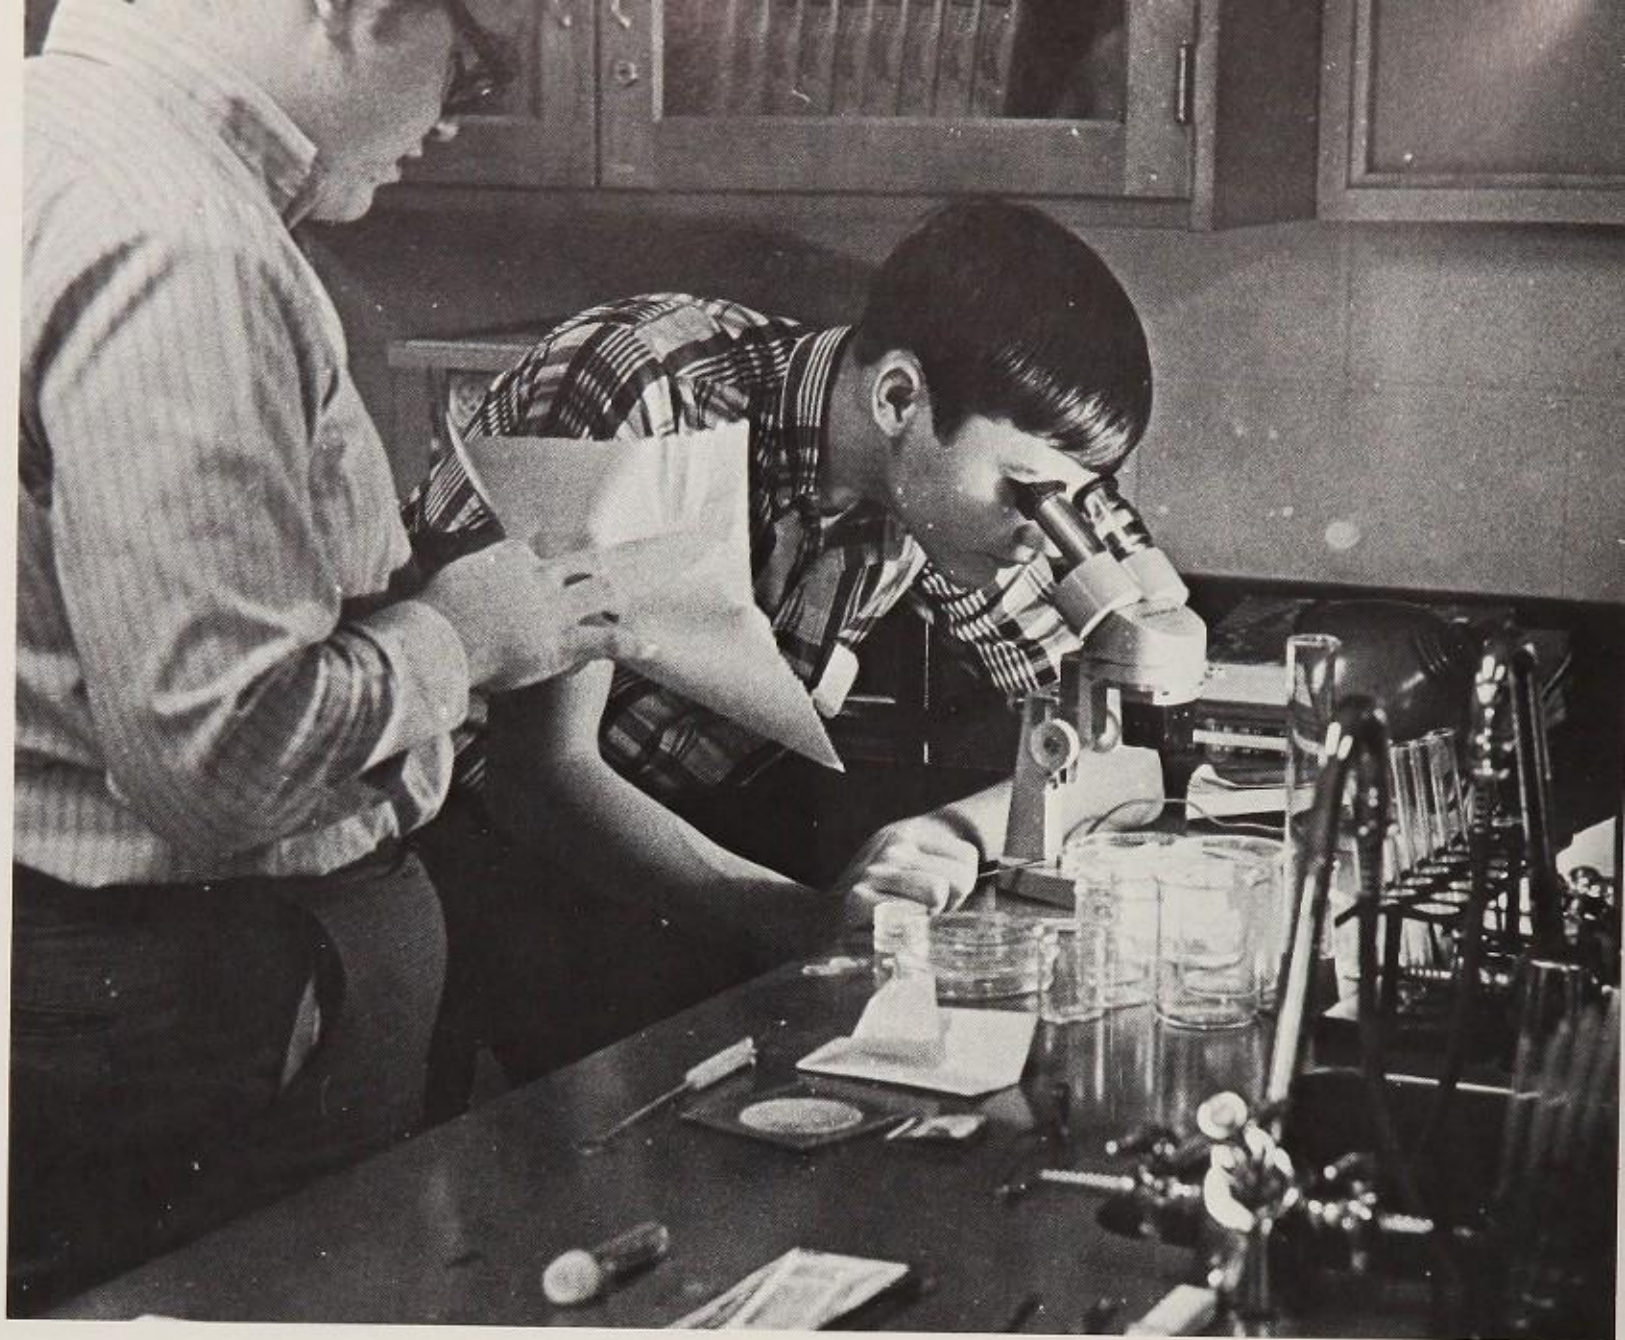

Communication is all there is,
all there possibly can be between people.
Lack of communication is the one failure
that everyone must overcome.
Communication is the one hope.

It takes a friend
to pull you through crisis after crisis,
real or imagined.
Helping is the vital part of proving friendship:
helping to understand,
to lighten the work,
to ease over troubles;
and to know
when not to help.

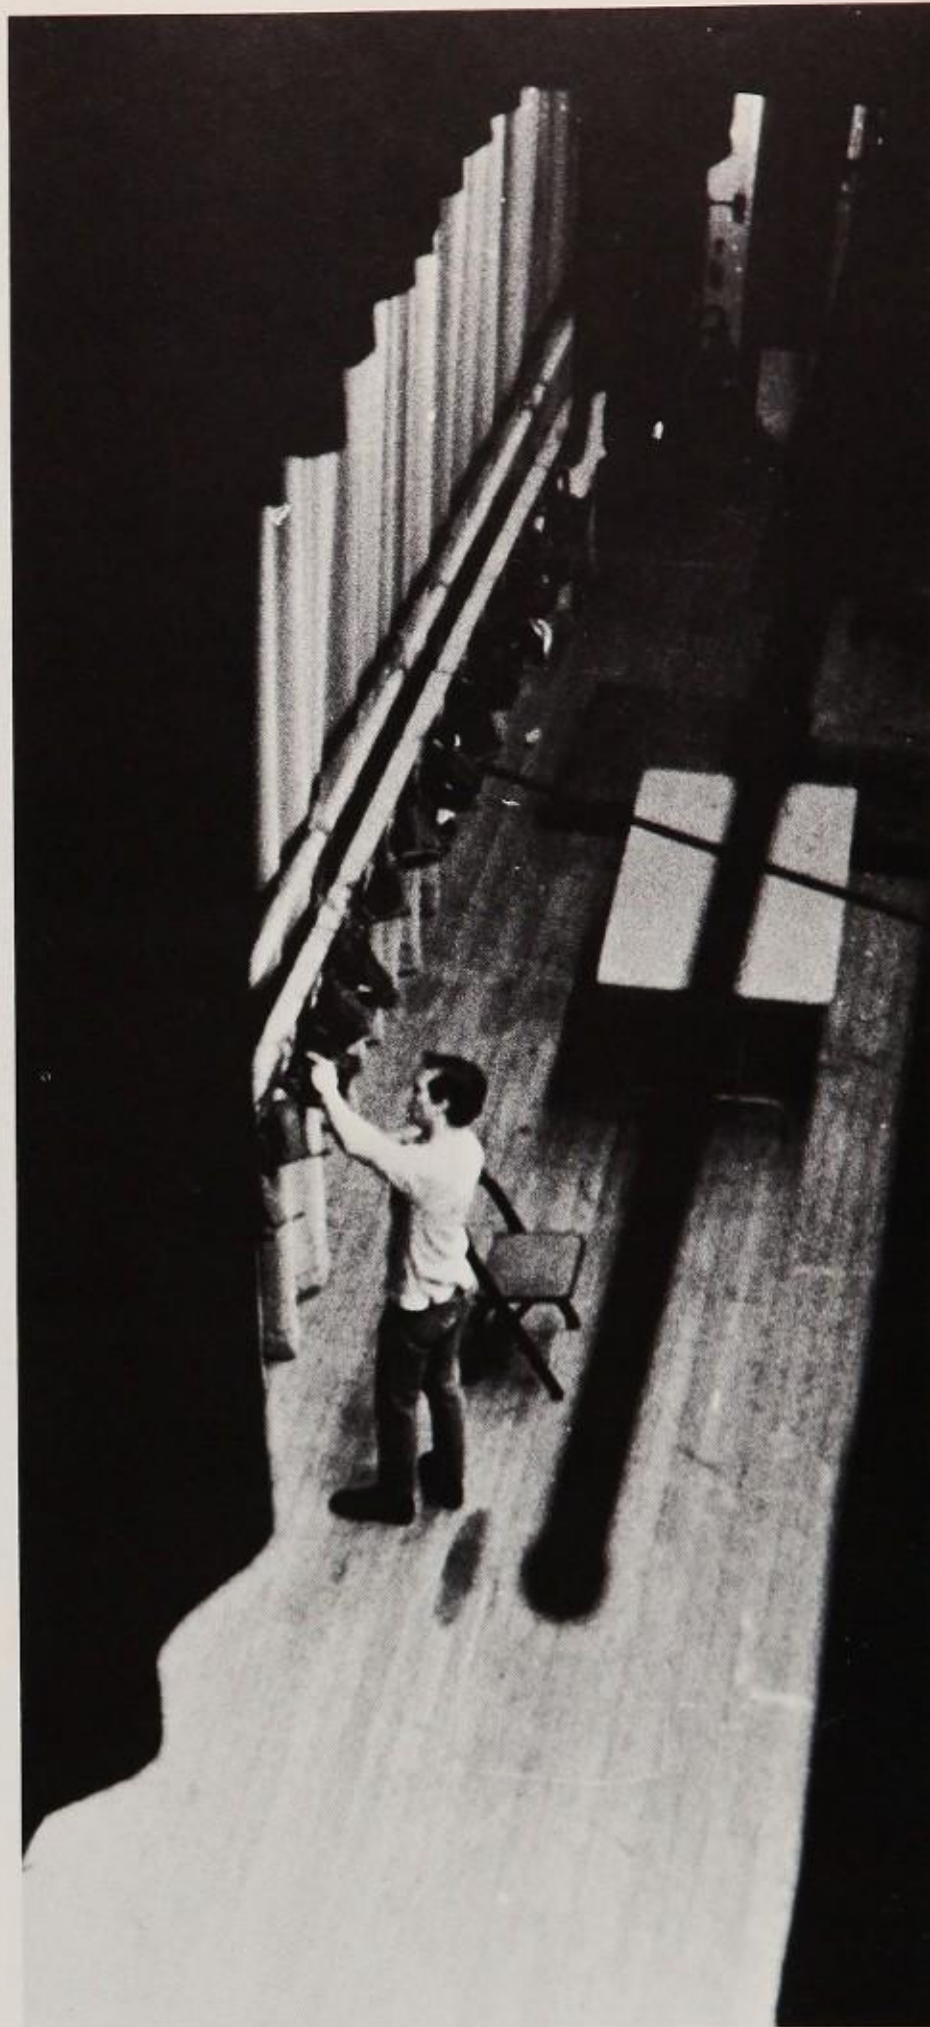

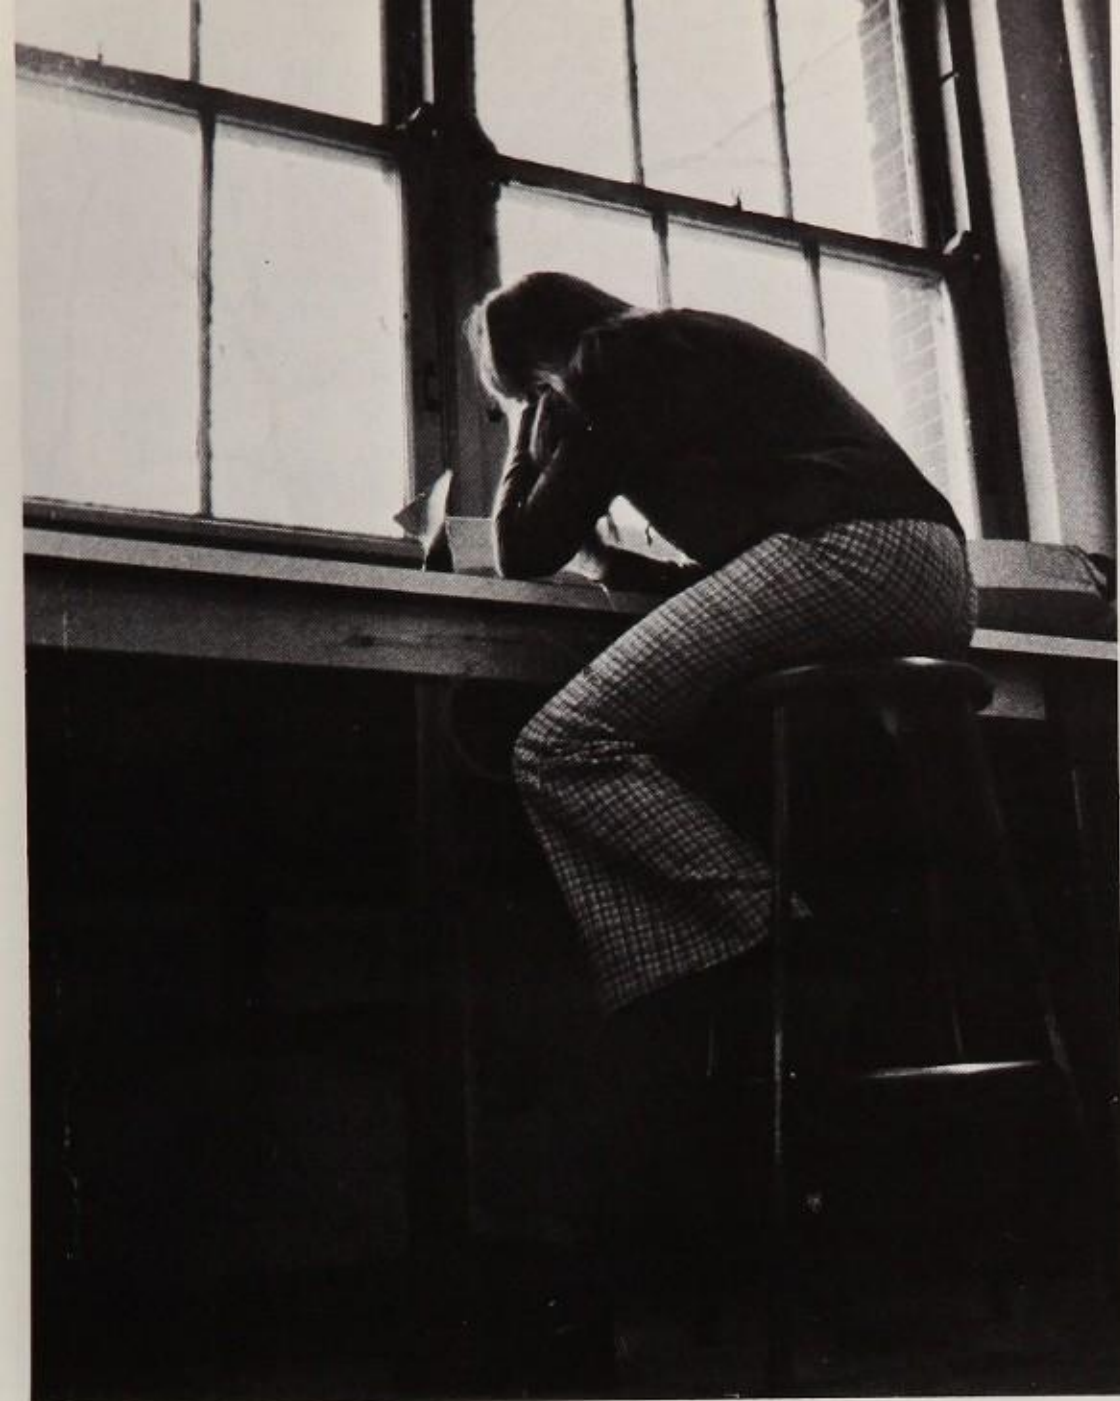

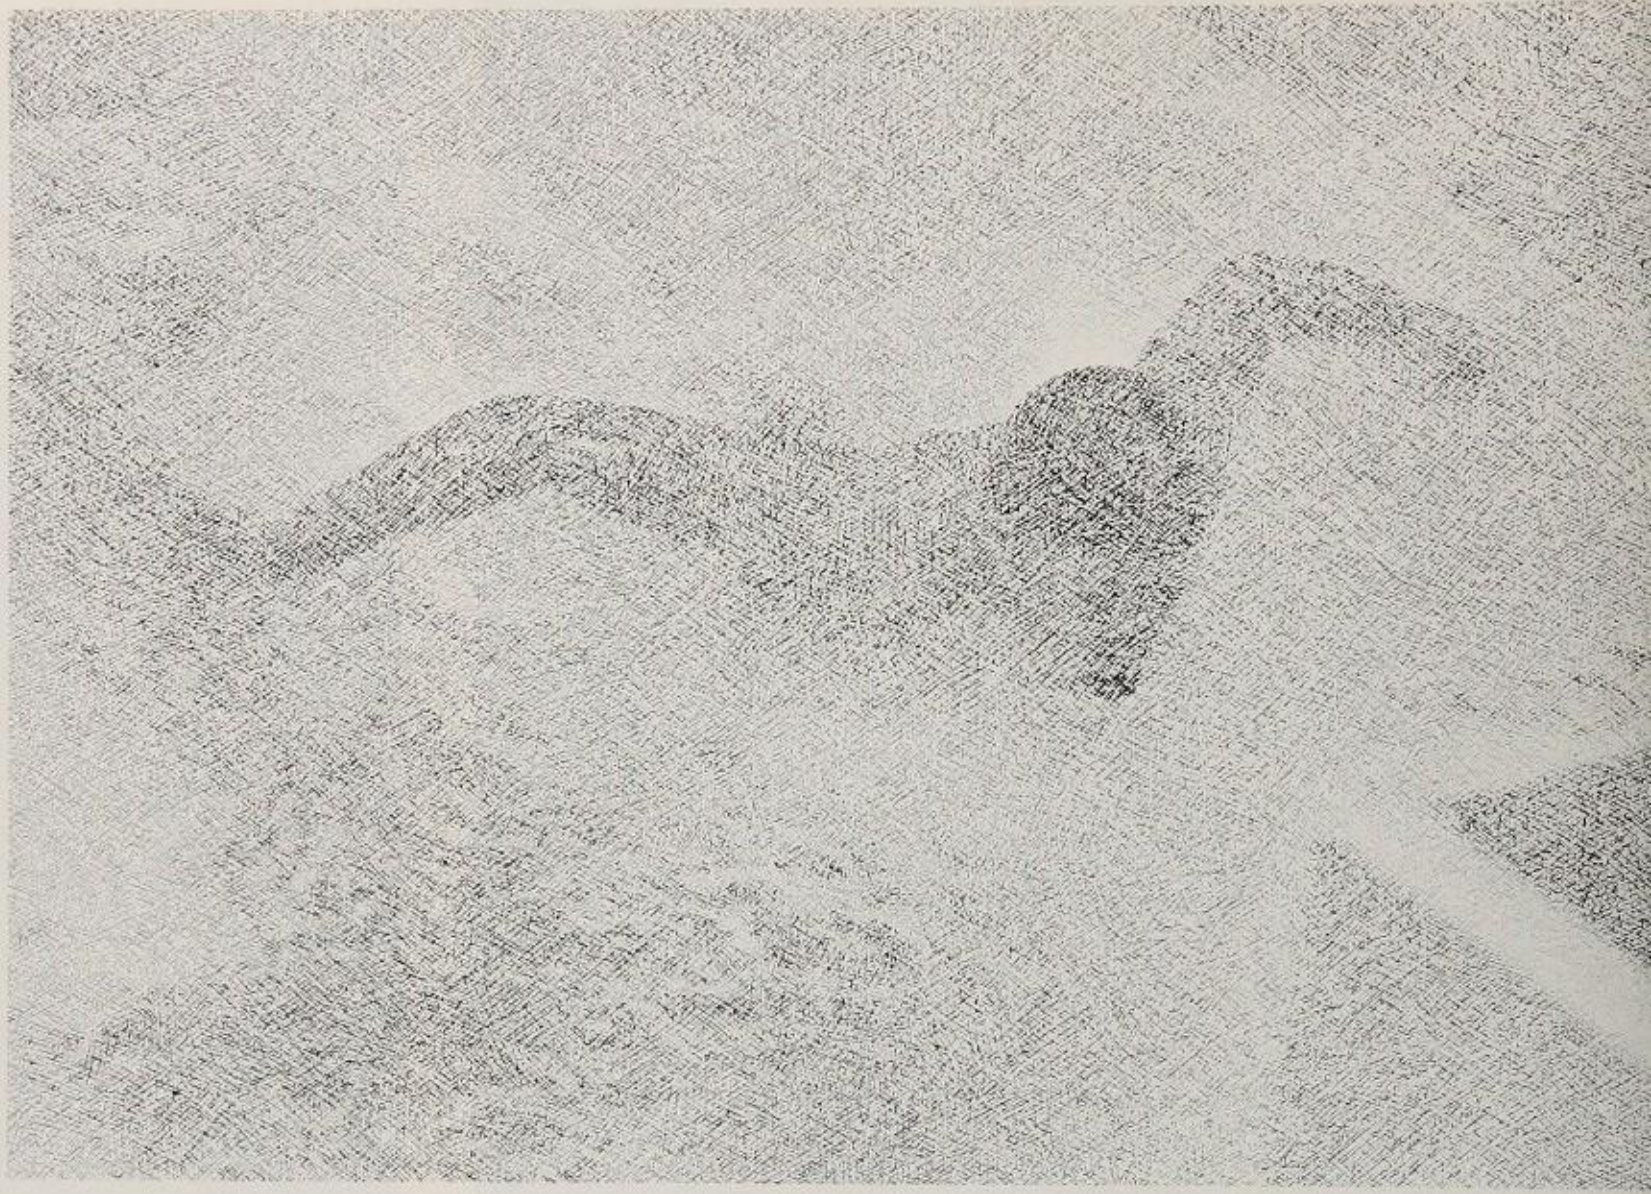

You come to school
with one basic purpose:
you come to learn.
What you learn it from,
whom you learn it from,
and where you learn it
decide everything for you.

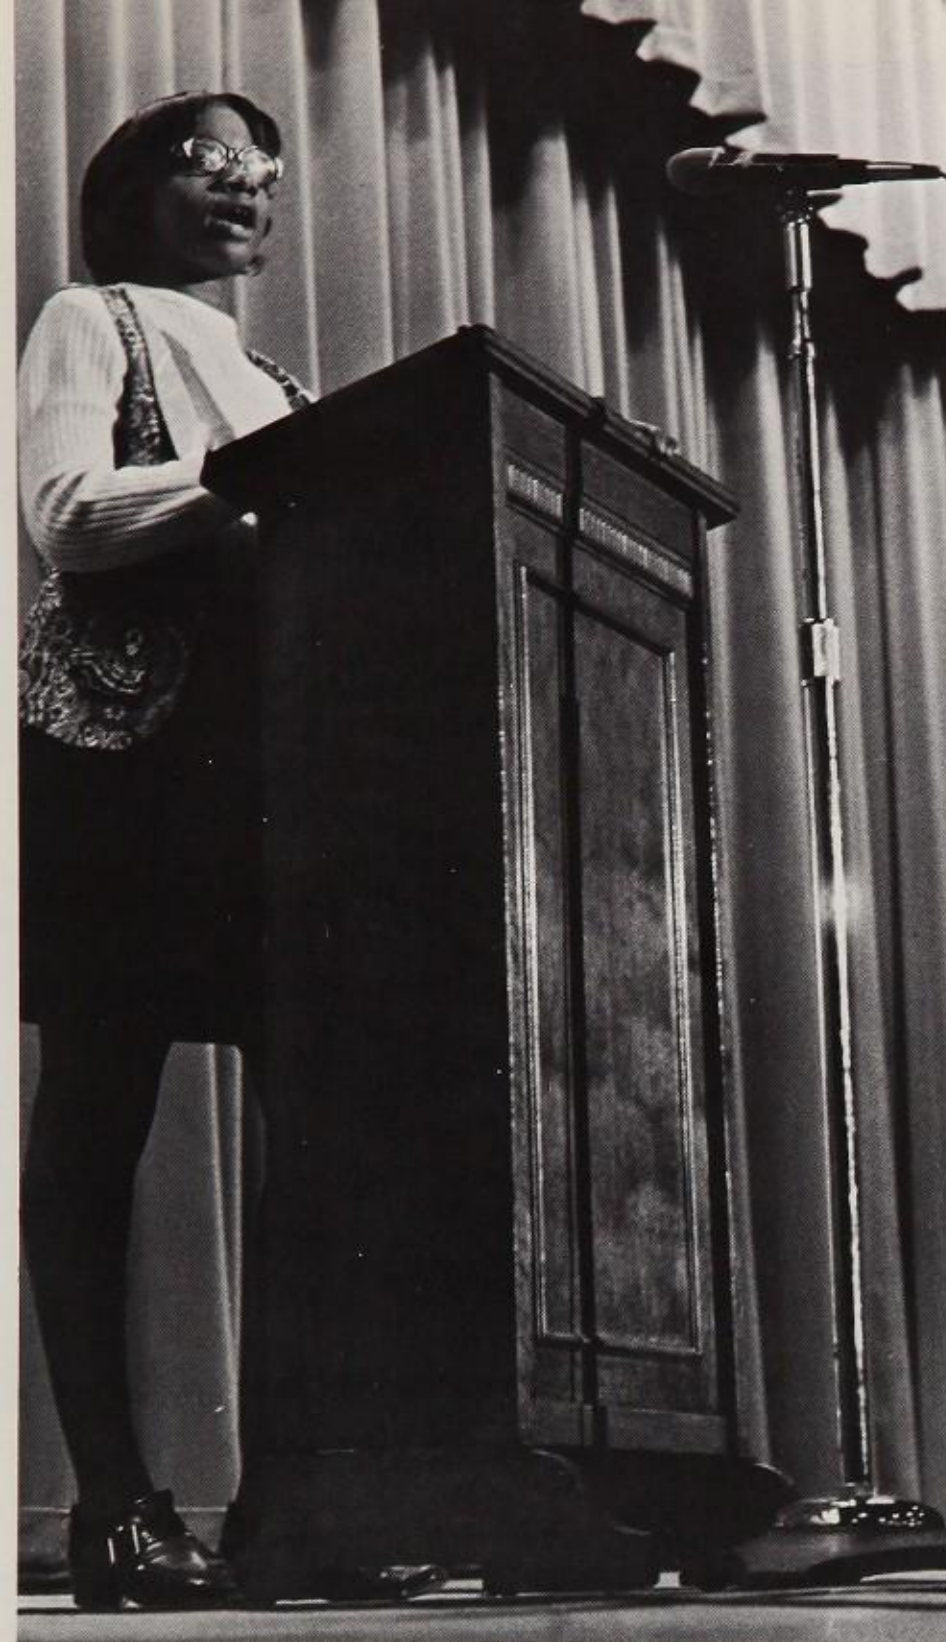

Everyone here is,
consciously or otherwise,
looking for something
to devote his time to,
some way to express himself.
They find it everywhere:
gym, classroom, stage;
some don't find it in the school
but in friends or job or church;
some don't find it at all.
And some never will.

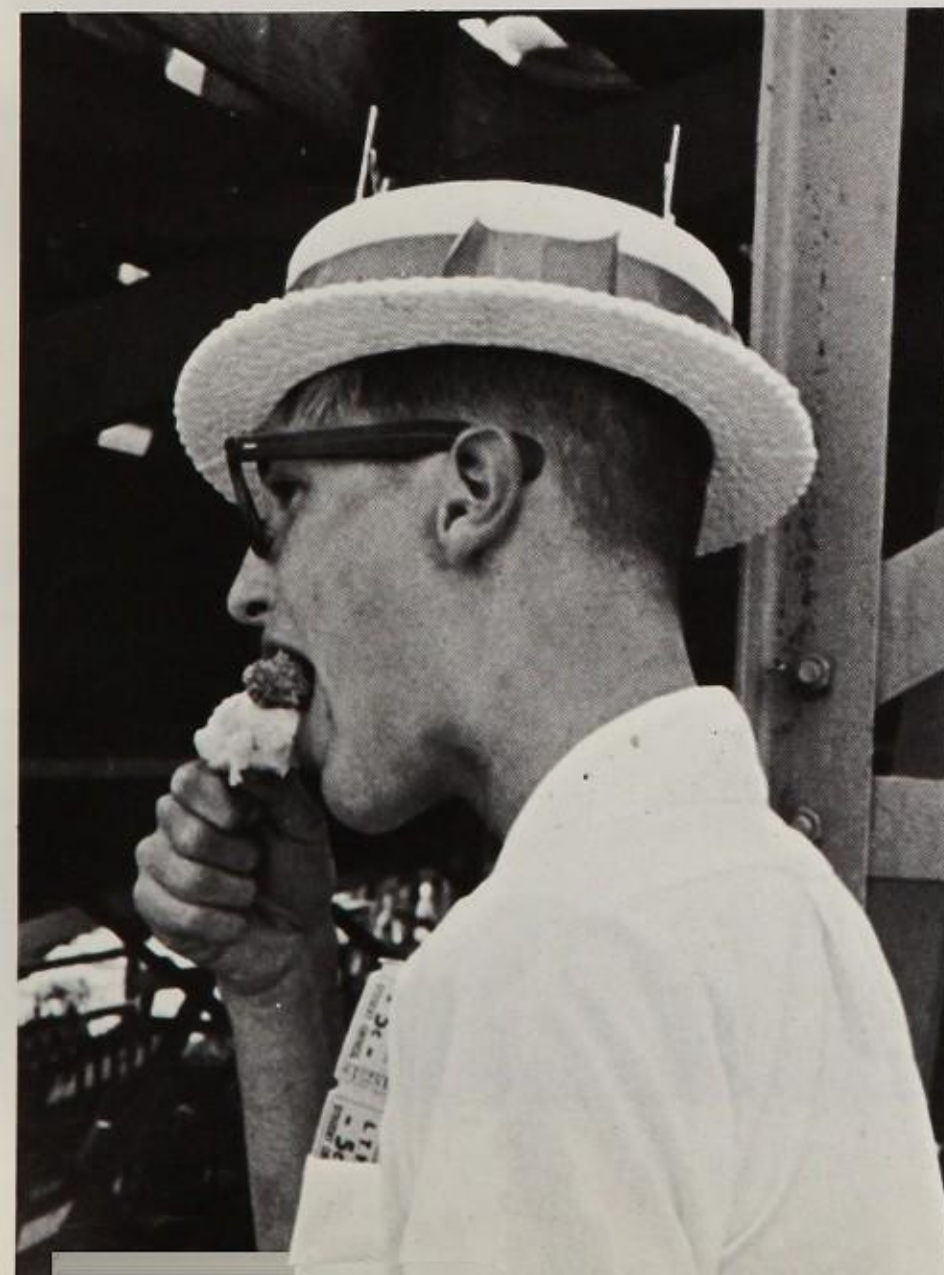

Somewhere you
must find something,
something that you can do best
and have a good time doing.
It doesn't matter in particulars:
what and when and where;
it doesn't even matter
whether anyone else
knows about it.
What matters is that you find it.

You need time
to sit by yourself
and not think of anything
in particular,
a time to stare into space,
or concentrate on something that doesn't really matter.
Or a time to talk about nothing more important than nothing at all.
A time when mild joy
is the strongest emotion
and when you can escape
from any noise
except your own.

This school is immense.
But it has been divided into campuses and classes,
into groups and factions,
smaller and smaller until at last it gets down to you.

STUDENT LIFE

You read all
the bulletin boards and posters
pasted around the school,
articles in the paper
announcing assemblies and plays,
telling of special events,
visitors, and honors awards.
These become topics for conversation
throughout the school —
not the basic topics,
like clothes, homework,
Friday nights, cars, and general gossip about other people —
but topics that spring up for a while along with the always issues of drugs and Vietnam,
rioting and sex.

Of course, this is
no picture of all student life,
because not everybody feels himself to have anything at all to do
with these events,
even though they are the most colorful events
in this school.

Cheers from a grandstand full of fans and a double file of beautiful girls meet the team as it bursts through the balloon-rimmed hoop.

Homecoming '70: 'The Greatest Show on Earth'

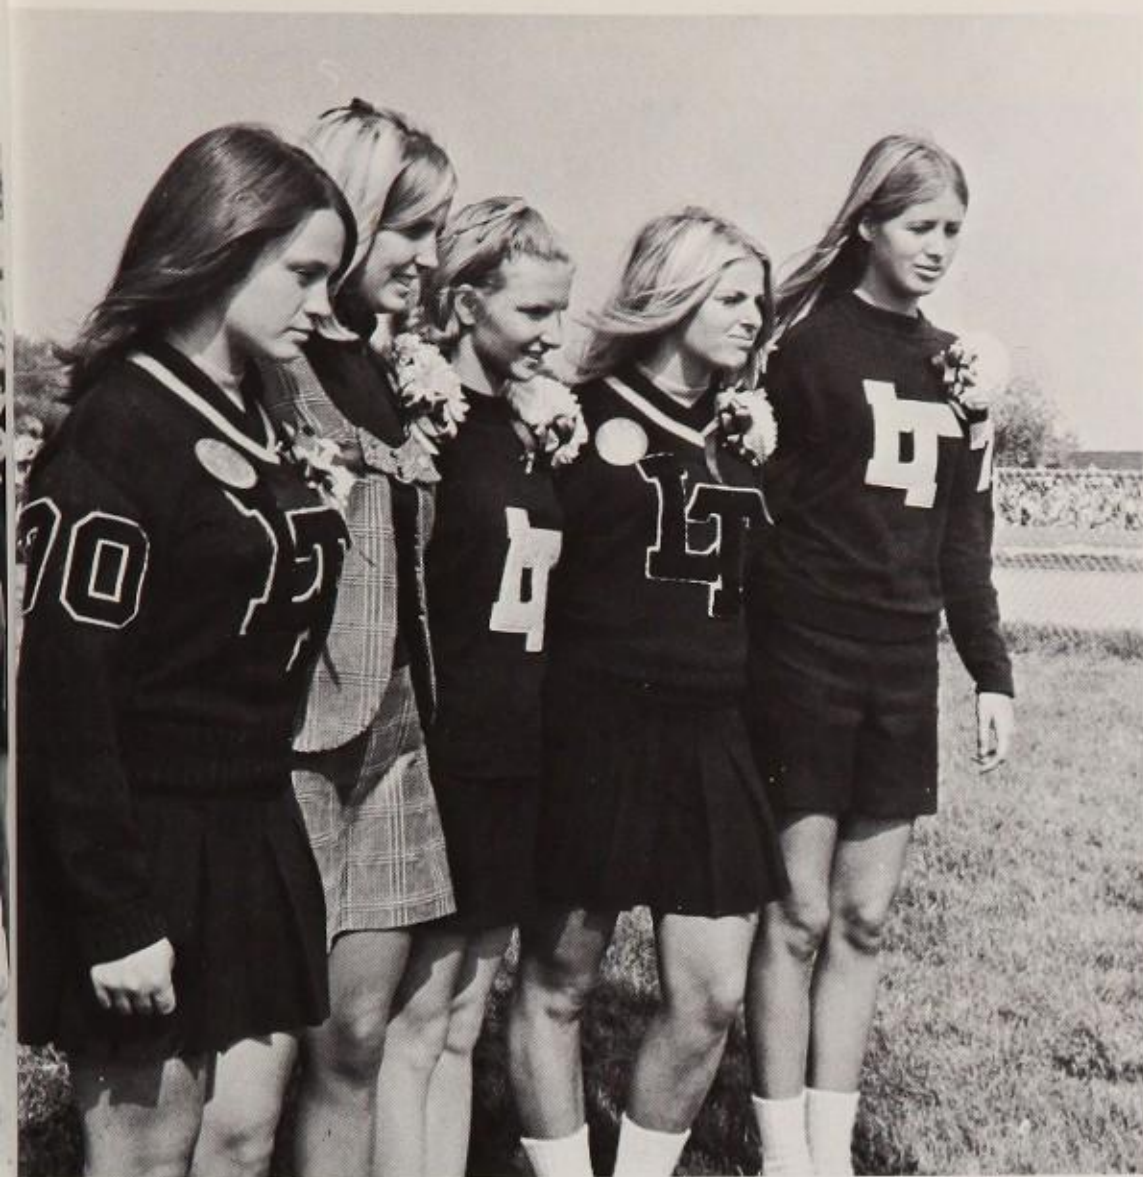

"The Greatest Show on Earth" welcomed back the Class of '45 to LT's Homecoming '70. Preparations began early in September; the float buildings started one week prior to the big weekend.

"In the Center Ring" drew students to the Corral to preview the queen nominees. Red hands and sore throats were the results of the spirited pep assembly, "Under the Big Top," held in the new fieldhouse. "The Grand March" drew many adults and children to the sidewalks and curbs to see the creative floats parade by.

Defeat in the tense Homecoming game was the only let-down during the whole weekend. Brightening things for many was the Homecoming dance, "Carousel," with Queen Ann Meeks and her court reigning over the evening. Entertainment was provided by the Aldorf Orchestra and Jake Irons' Soul Experiment. As the excitement of the weekend died down, everyone was sad to see "The Circus" leave town.

Hesitating before popping the balloon containing the name of the queen, Gypsy Marie Ihde entertains the crowd with her mystical incantations.

Responding to one of many requests for a picture, Queen Ann Meeks and her court, Barb Sible, Barb Burdick, Geri Green, and Deb Kasbeer, position themselves.

During the Homecoming game, Glenbard runners realize that they can lose their shirts while attempting to penetrate the LT defensive line.

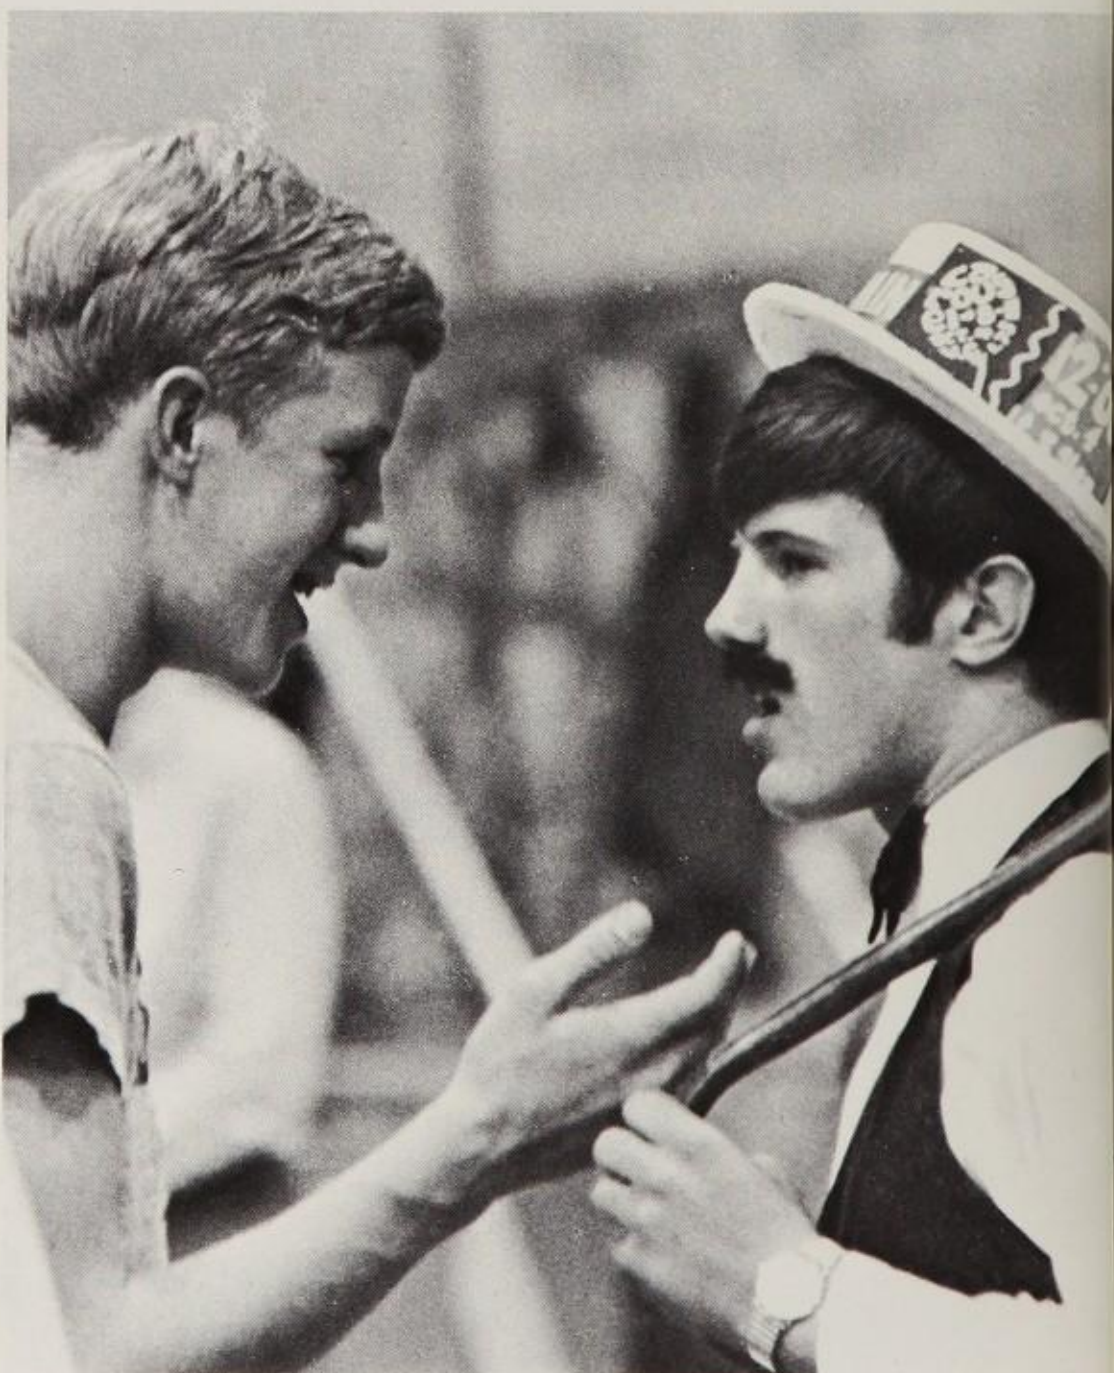

The necessity of last-minute repairs to insure the stability of their float occupies industrious sophomore workers.

Homecoming dance gives couples 'Carousel' ride

LT's senior football fans fearlessly flash cue cards to inspire their team down on the field.

When a problem arises just before the pep assembly, Andy Binder brings it to master of ceremonies Keith Melichar for a solution.

Conversation and cooperation make the necessarily tedious assembly-line work of float-building faster and more enjoyable.

The colorful spectacle of the Homecoming pep rally is made possible only by the less spectacular, behind-the-scenes efforts of many students.

Before following the parade route to Bennett Field, seniors Roberta Dostal and Debbie Leder admire the mammoth masterpiece of their class.

Exchange student Rubén finds life odd but pleasing

Rubén José Odriozola liked America but became perturbed by continual asking of the question, "How do you like America?" by people he had just met. He realized that it was one of the polite formalities that all foreign exchange students must face, but he could not find a short, suitable response to express his enjoyment. When he returns to Argentina to continue his studies in medicine, Ben must answer more questions, but he now is prepared with his own collection of slides to help him answer.

American Field Service picked the Katzmann house for Ben to live in, with junior Jeff, freshman Scott, and little brother Brent. In their pleasant room on the third floor are clippings of newspaper articles about Ben that Jeff has been jokingly keeping, against his new brother's wishes. Rubén was puzzled by little during his stay except the social life of LaGrange, and he declares that he learned much to take back to Argentina.

On his bulletin board, Rubén displays mementos of his stay in America.

A big brother can be a tease even if he's from Argentina.

In a game which he eventually won, Rubén accurately lines up a combination shot.

While Jeff composes a rondelet for English class, his AFS brother Rubén ponders his presentation for Speech class.

At a late summer picnic, Anne Graham acquaints her new Thai sister with American social customs.

As a professional photographer focuses for the family portrait, the group tries to maintain a mere smile at Mr. Stockbarger's joke.

Anxious to experiment with current American fashions, Alida is aided in her struggle with a hairpiece by her American sister Sally Stockbarger.

friendship is the most valuable thing you gave me and I will keep it with me forever

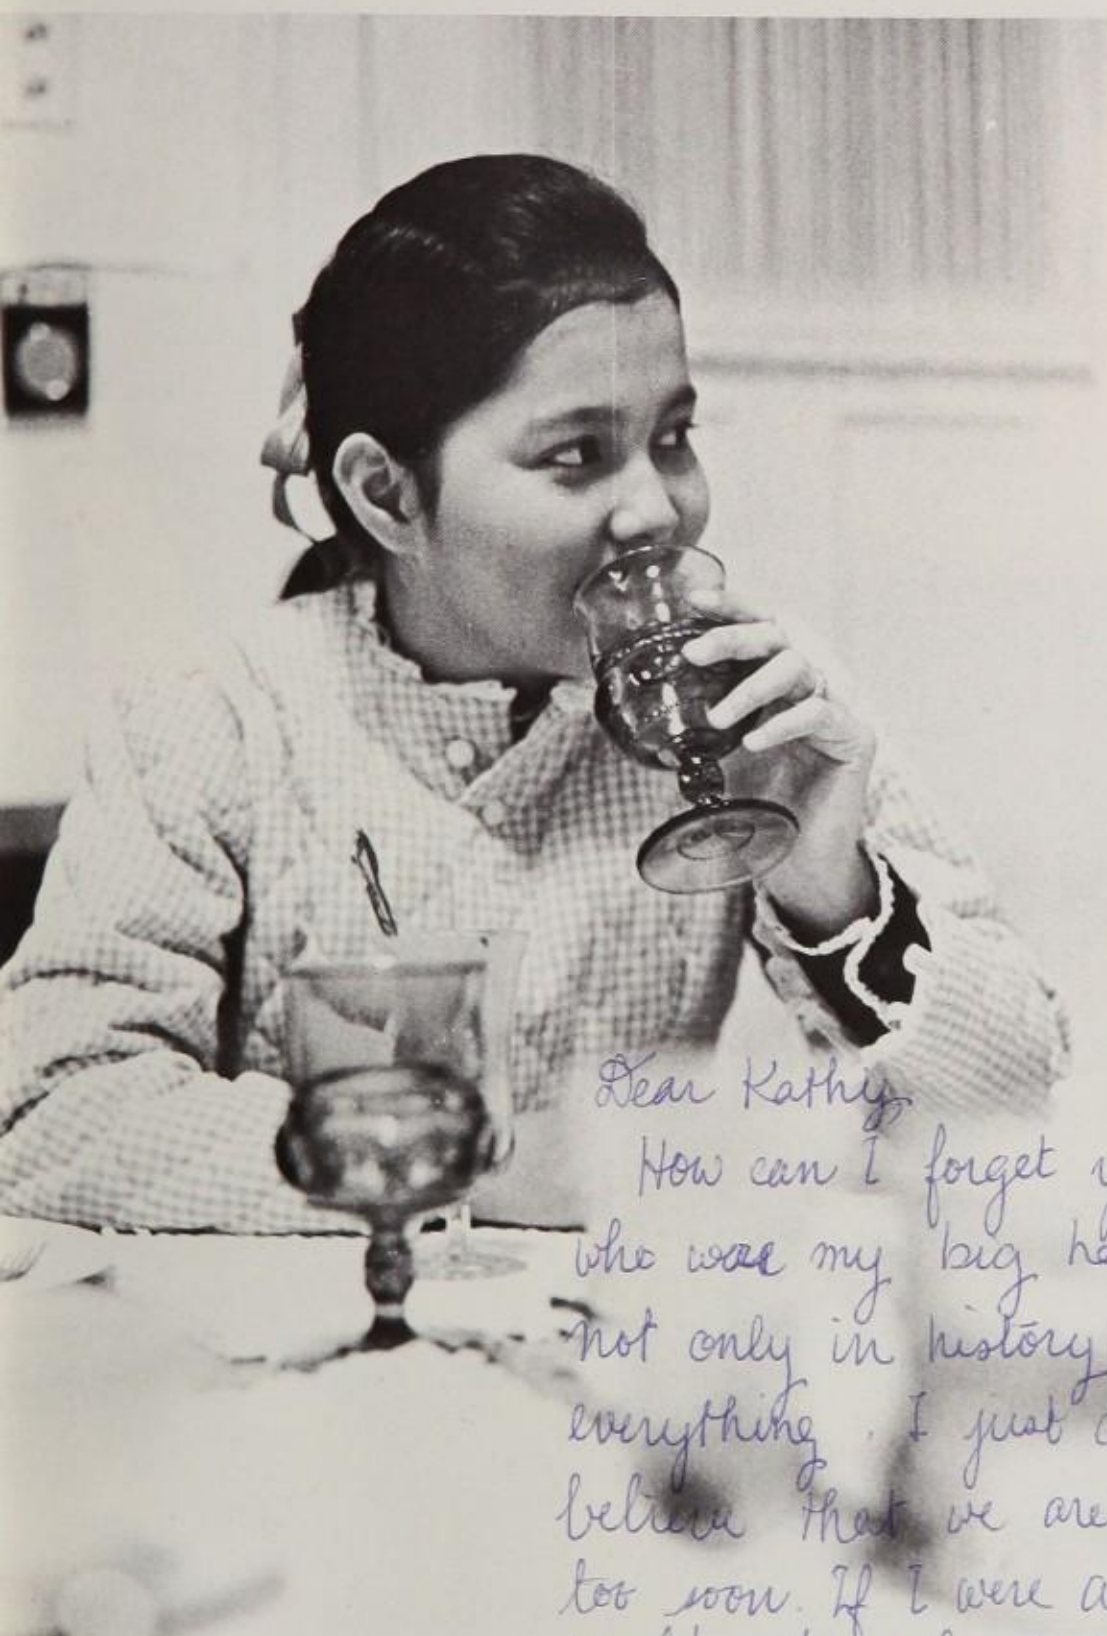

LaGrange's cold, snowbound winter surprises Alida

Experiencing two changes of family within one year, Alida Nootkanjanakool, LT's AFS exchange student from Thailand, made her first move last July by plane from her home in Bangkok. She lived in the house of junior Anne Graham until January when Anne's father, Rev. Warren Graham, accepted a position in Pennsylvania. Alida then made a second, shorter move to live with senior Sally Stockbarger.

Alida also went through changes in school systems, coming from a girls' school with a thousand pupils from kindergarten to twelfth grade and thirteen required subjects. Having already attended one month of college, she found classes here easy. Alida added that the classes would have been no problem at all if they had been in the Thai language.

She was surprised by the cold weather and snow, which she did not appreciate at first, and by washing machines, which are a rarity even in technologically advanced Bangkok. Although she found the people and food agreeable, she missed her family and had mixed emotions about returning.

Dear Kathy,
How can I forget you who were my big helper not only in history but everything. I just don't believe that we are separated too soon. If I were a witch I would stop the time so we will be together forever. Please always remember your Thai friend. I will remember you forever. Love much Alida

The dinner table provides Alida with excellent opportunities to improve her conversational English as well as to become accustomed to American food.

Rabiha and Anne compare preferences for records by Charles Aznavour and The Association in their shared bedroom.

Rabiha finds herself at ease in complex America

During her first few weeks here, Rabiha Zeidguy was able to write a newspaper article telling exactly what she thought of America; by the middle of the year she was unable to pinpoint her opinions and felt as though she had lived here seventeen years. She found herself dispelling rumors about the customs of Morocco, her home country, especially concerning the progress and transportation.

Rabiha discovered in Anne Hoffman a great sister and best friend; in sophomore Bob, a brotherly tease. One of the high points of her year was a half-page article in the Chicago Daily News featuring Anne and Rabiha as the model for the relationship between exchange students and American sisters.

ICYE student Tom views American life through LT

Most foreign students are placed in homes with high school students to help with adjustment. When Thomas Elser came to La Grange from Faurndav, West Germany, he was told by the International Christian Youth Exchange, which sponsored him, that he was to live with the Liebenthals, who had no children at LT. Tom weighed the rewards of both kinds of housing arrangements and defended his aloneness because it made him rely on his own resources. He also explained that, with a brother his own age, "there could be a fight if you don't understand each other."

Tom must now return to two more years of high school at a school with a thousand boys and without LT's competitive atmosphere and constant encouragement to participate.

"You don't belong to a school; you just attend classes there in Germany," says Tom. He did join Student Council and played soccer, which is more of a team game in the United States than it is in Germany.

Throughout the year, he met with other exchange students brought over by ICYE in connection with the Methodist church, and with them he took a trip to a Chicago ghetto. That trip was of particular interest to Tom because of his plans to study psychology and sociology. He and this same group, on the way to America, learned many facts about life here, but Tom and the others had to cope with many unexplained situations alone when they arrived.

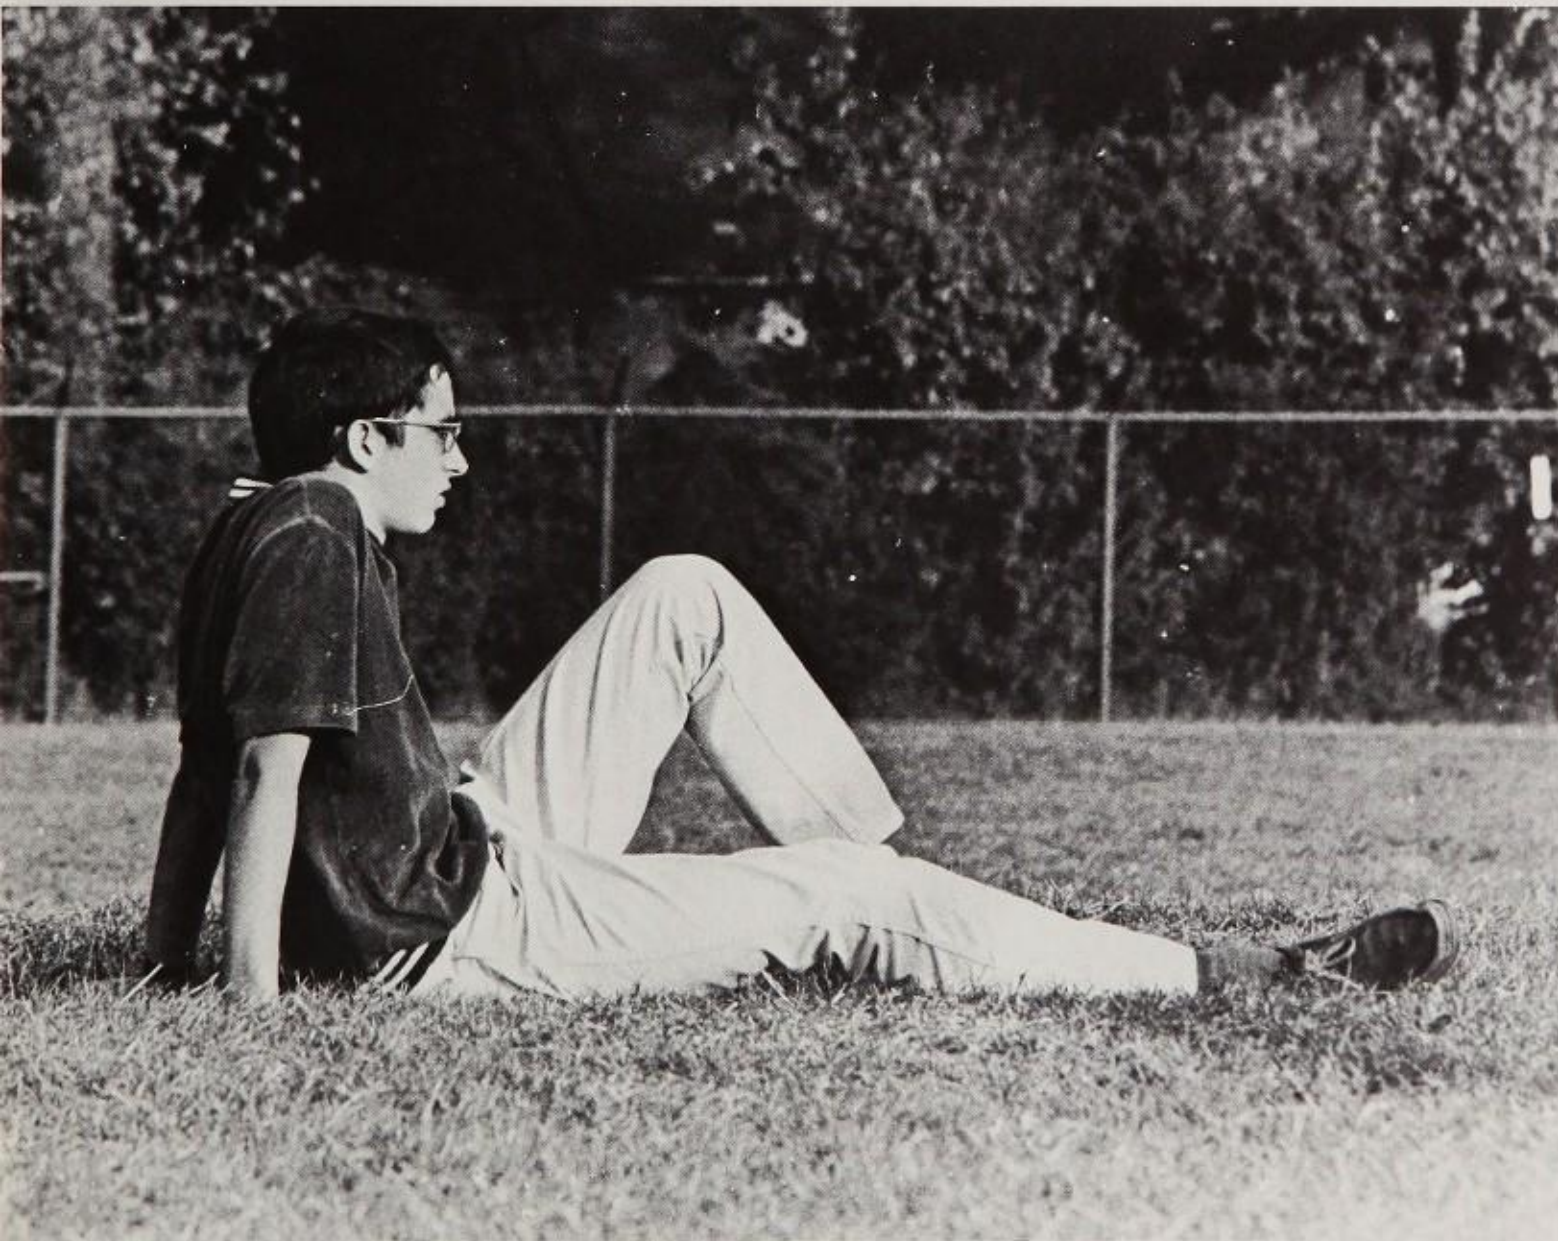

Tom quickly adopts the American pastime of nightly raiding the icebox.

The technical terms of physics require the use of an English-German dictionary.

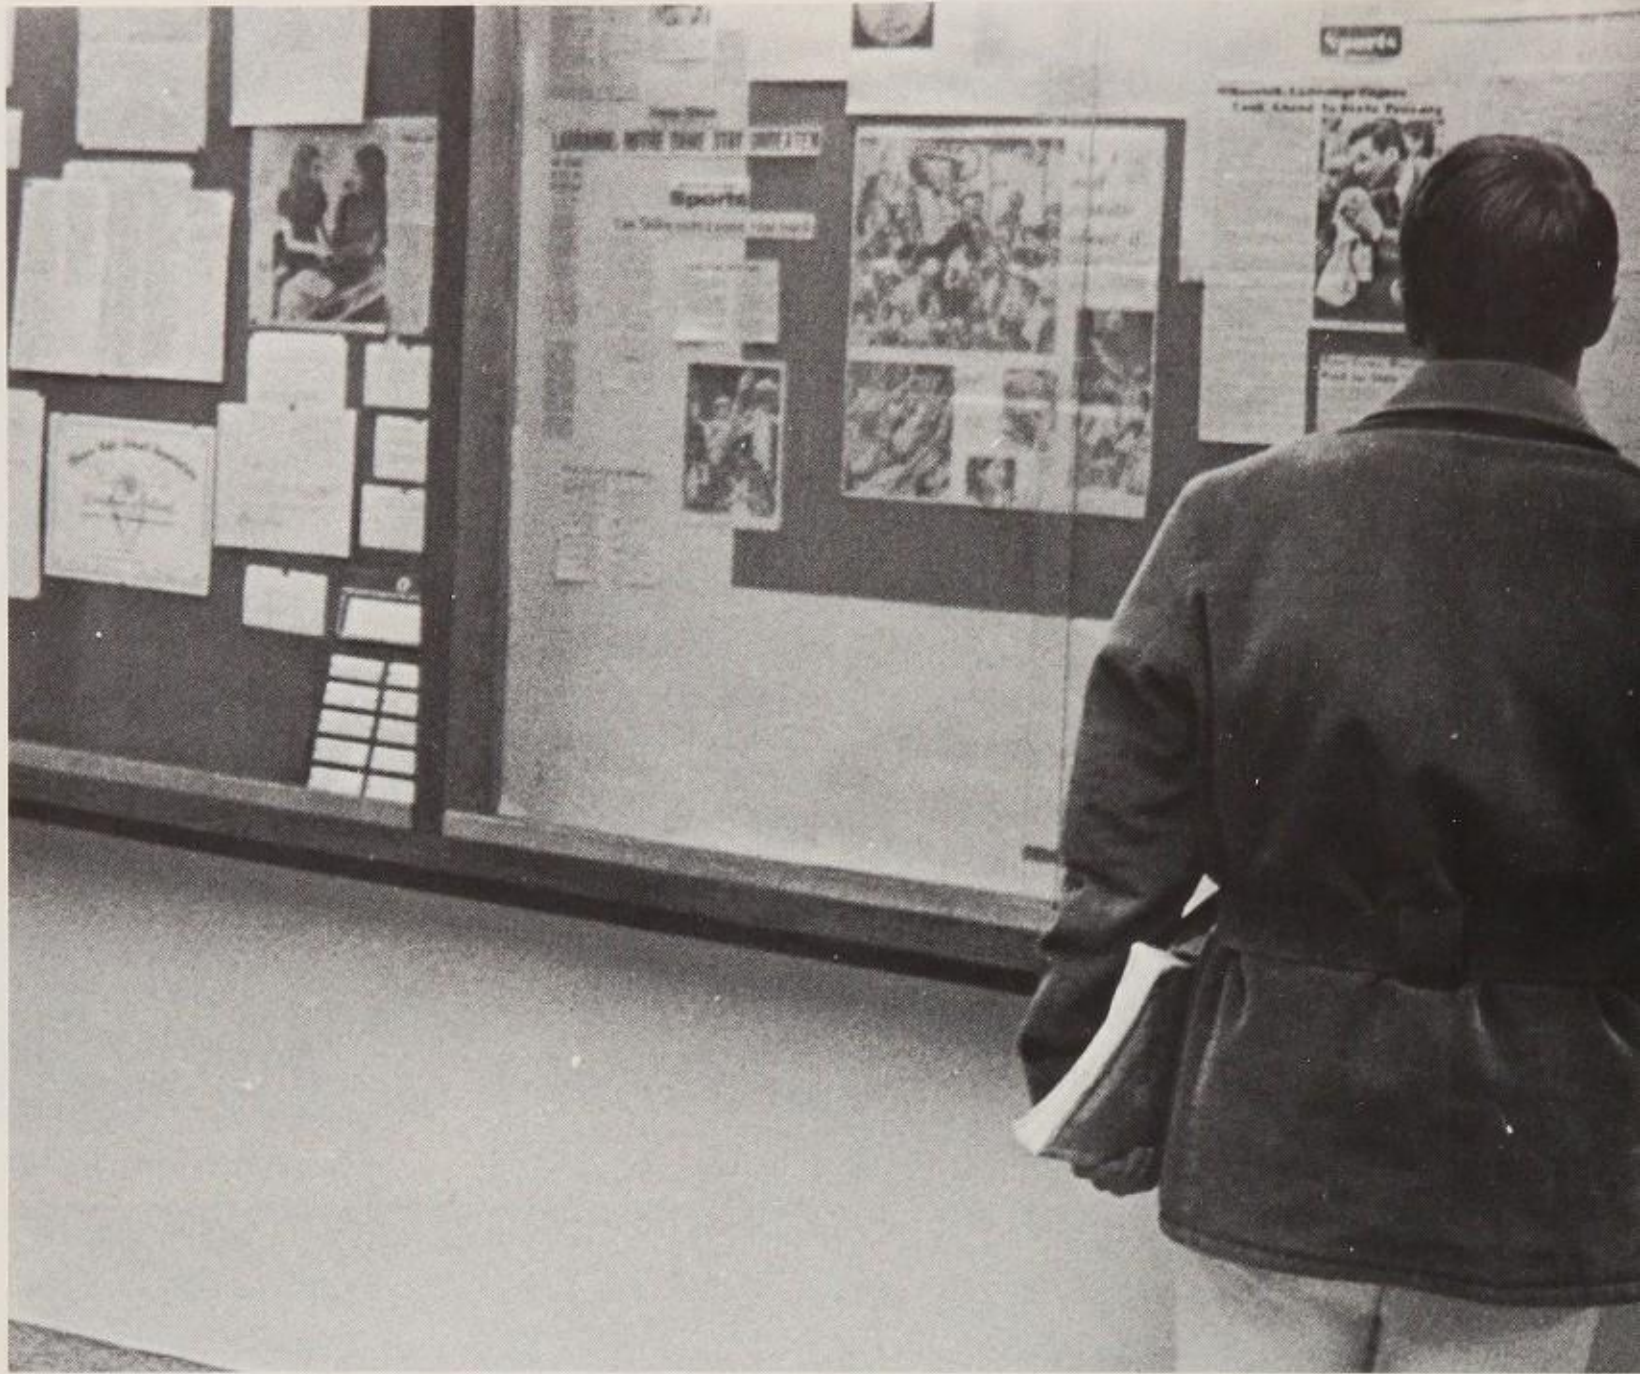

By deep concentration and regular practice, Tom achieved the enviable record of winning five skittle-pool games out of six.

After practicing with the soccer team, Tom Elser must watch from the sidelines because of eligibility rules.

Tom Clutter pauses to check the honors and awards cabinet's new addition: articles about the number-one-rated Lions.

Upperclassmen learn value of Honor Society recognition

One hundred fifty-eight LT seniors were elected to National Honor Society, including sixty elected in their junior year. Teachers, counselors, and sponsors of activities evaluated students in the top third of their class. Their nominations were sent to a council consisting of administrators, faculty members, and counselors. This council selected students on basis of their scholarship, leadership, citizenship, and sportsmanship. Each student selected officially enrolled on the roster of the nation-wide society, and received the pin or charm awarded by the society.

Besieged by attractive college offers, National Merit finalists Noel Farner, Chuck Sparks, and Bob McClain scan the college catalogs in the library.

LT scholars finish high in National Merit competition

Boasting eighteen National Merit Finalists, LT ranked high among Chicago area schools in the total number of students so honored. Superior scores on the test administered the previous spring qualified these students as semi-finalists. Having achieved a finalist standing in February, all these students became eligible for scholarship awards from many sources. Winners were notified in April that either because of their choice of school, father's employer, or financial situation that they would become scholarship recipients. All the finalists were besieged with numerous attractive college offers from all over the country.

Illinois State Scholars received recognition for high achievement on the ACT test, consequently receiving college offers from the majority of the state schools. To take advantage of a monetary award, students must attend a state school, but wherever a student applied, this honor enhanced his school record.

Summer students produce musical 110 in the Shade

Seventy students participated in the full-credit summer course, Theatre Workshop, while attending classes in drama, music, design, and stagecraft. The students rushed to complete making costumes, building props, and rehearsing lines in time for their own production, 110 in the Shade by Harvey Schmitt and Sam Jones. The story involves a dreamer, Starbuck, who claims he can bring rain to a drought-ridden town, but who only succeeds in teaching the people about themselves.

The highlight of the course was a three-day trip to the Stratford Shakespearean Festival in Ontario, Canada. The entire group viewed professionals performing in several classical and modern plays.

File	John Honeycutt
Jimmy Curry	Joe Bocunas
H. C. Curry	Scott Yount
Noah Curry	Gary Leviton
Snookie	Peggy Linabury
Supporting Roles: Helen Borotinski, Dawn Evans, Alan Hamblin, Judy Kalina, Jon Pannier, Missy Ristig, Connie Scarnavack.

As her brother Noah looks on knowingly, H.C. questions Lizzie about her behavior during her week away from home.

With faith that a bass drum and Starbuck will end the drought, Jimmy Curry beats it "whenever he gets the feeling."

After he and his waspish secretary have expressed their mutual repulsion, the President fires Chevrement and replaces her with the more complimentary Agnes.

The dramatic entrance of Cleopatra, the Serpent of the Nile, provokes varied responses from Shakespeare's ladies.

Four at Eight presents four one-act comedies

Four at Eight, a unique program of four one-act comedies, was presented at North Campus as the 1969 Fall Play. The plays, directed by Mr. Frank Stacey and Mr. Scott Fogelson, were: The Apollo of Bellac by Jean Giraudou, Tiny Closet by William Inge, The Still Alarm by G. S. Kaufmann, and When Shakespeare's Ladies Meet by Charles George. Because of the different historical periods and situations, the work of the prop and costume committees was quadrupled. Variations of and additions to a single basic set created four completely different locales. A total cast of twenty-seven rehearsed for long hours before presenting what the audience termed a polished, innovative production.

LT Fantasticks cast stages Hull House performance

Fantasticks, by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, is a play that can be experienced on both a group and individual level. The Winter Play was the first LT production to use theatre-in-the-round and the South Campus multi-purpose room. Transferring all equipment from North Campus, making the best of poor acoustics, and overcoming a complete lack of theatrical facilities were accomplished to stage a triumphant holdover, a special performance at Hull House, and a WTTW-TV taping.

The plot is deceptively simple, consisting of the relationship between a boy and girl who are more in love with their adventurous dreams and hopes than with each other. As the play unfolds, they experience reality with the help of the bandit El Gallo and two roving actors. Utilizing current theatre techniques such as an on-stage props box and the moods impressions relayed by The Mute, the presentation caused uproarious laughter as well as tears to the accompaniment of harp and piano.

Through their staged abduction of Luisa, the roving actors Mortimer and Henry are successful in convincing Matt that she is in need of rescue.

Held spellbound, Matt's and Luisa's fathers listen to the devious El Gallo's elaborate plans for a romantic rape.

After the Yoder barn is destroyed by a mysterious fire, all the inhabitants of Bird-in-Hand help out to raise a new one.

Plain and Fancy presents view of Pennsylvania Dutch

The contrast between the cosmopolitan ways of a pair of visiting city slickers and a rustic Amish community provides the basis for the Choir Operetta, Glickman and Hague's Plain and Fancy, directed by Donna Mavros and Fred Lawler. The universal truth that love conquers all despite scotch, carnivals, bluebirds and schnitz und knepp is demonstrated in urban and rural romance. Highlights of the action included a barn-raising and a strobe-lit dance hall.

Research into authentic Pennsylvania Dutch clothing and homes lent realism to costumes and scenery. Aprons and prayer caps for the girls and suspenders and beards for the boys added to the Amish severity as well as contrasted with the fashionable attire of the city visitors. Stage crew executed scene changes by the use of a scrim curtain and movable platform sets. A multitude of authentic props furnished a kitchen and sitting room, although the most spectacular prop was a shiny green dune buggy.

Rehearsals began directly after Christmas vacation when the double-cast leads worked in after-school sessions and the chorus staged the big production numbers. Spicing the show with both dramatic and light music, the chorus and pit orchestra complemented the action and accompanied the solos and dance numbers.

Look Homeward, Angel propels audience back to 1916

A sentimental return to North Carolina in 1916, the Spring Play was Look Homeward, Angel, the autobiography of Thomas Wolfe as dramatized by Ketti Frings.

Director Mr. Michael Drake and student director Kathi Mynaugh elected to rehearse one scene each week in the basement of North Campus before moving to their thrust stage in the multi-purpose room at South Campus. The major set was the Dixieland Boarding House, run by Eliza and Helen and inhabited by the "batty boarders," including girls for the two Gant boys, Ben and Gene.

Like the Carrara marble angel in W.O. Gant's stoneyard that the stonecarver refused to use except for his own grave, W.O.'s son Gene was held by his mother, Eliza. The plot climaxed with Gene's attempts to grow up, culminating in his reaction to Ben's death. Utilizing the costumes and dialects of the setting, the play ran April 9-11, taking the audience on a fanciful journey to a former time, a different place.

Supporting Roles: Dan Eaton, Greg Engstrom, Karen Fink, John Honeycutt, Marty Ihde, Mark Kadlec, Linda Murphy, Sue Olson, Mark Paulsen, Joel Preston, Barb Sible, Kris Snelling, Scott VanKoughnett, Melanie Wilson.

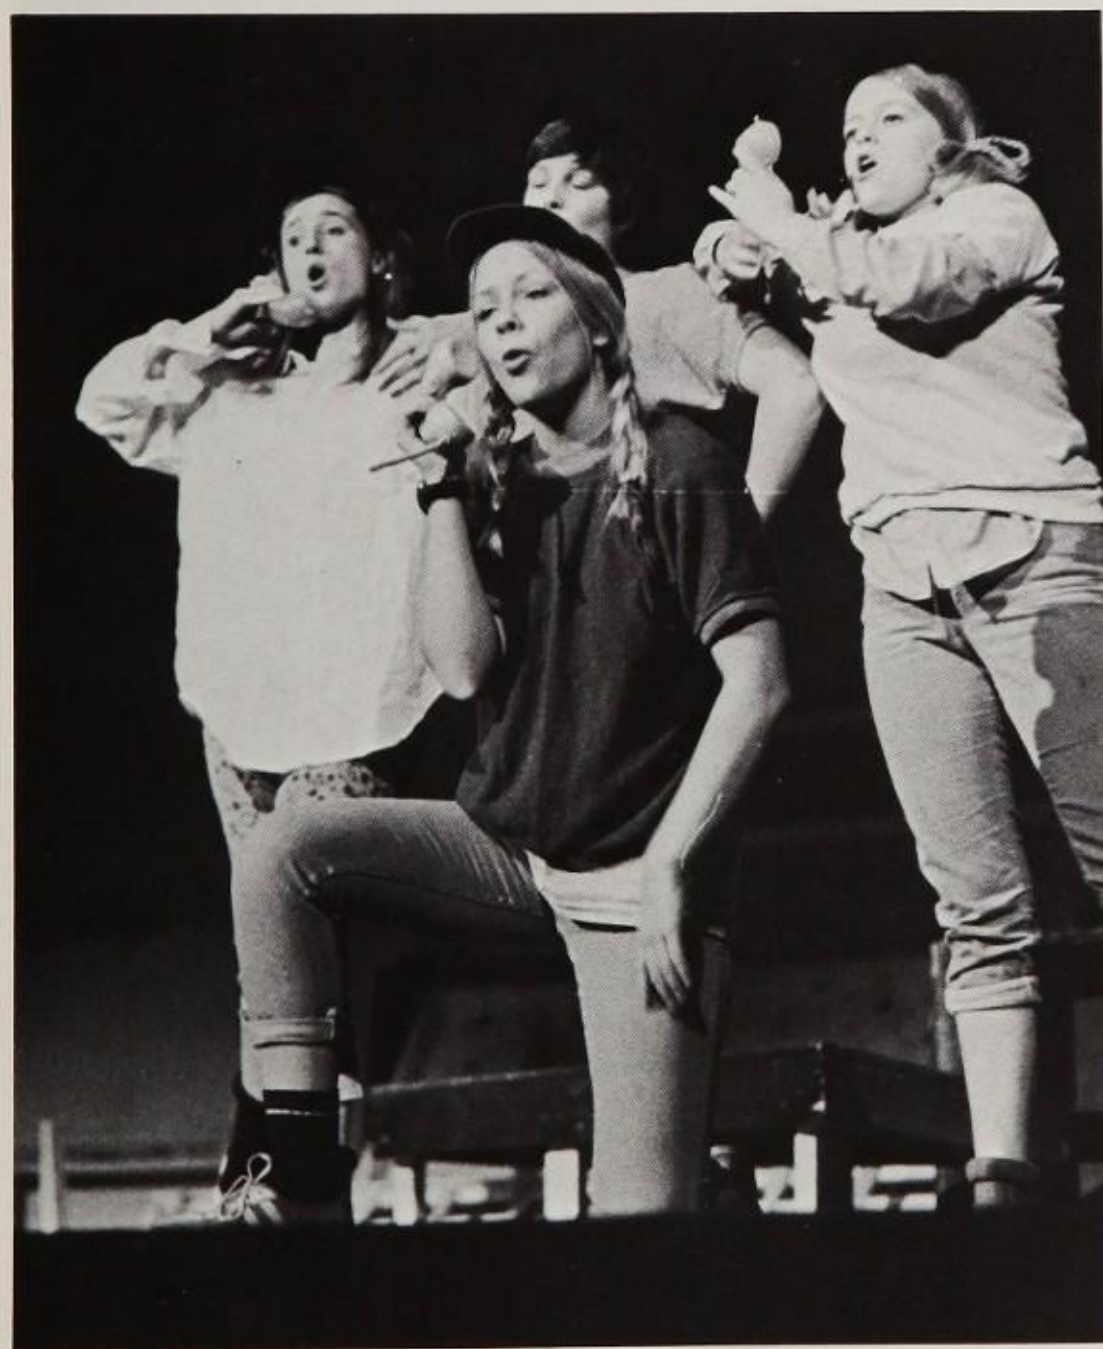

Although the occasion for Luke's homecoming is brother Ben's death, Helen welcomes her brother when he returns from the Navy.

Mr. Drake arranges the blocking of a scene for Bill Stecz and Carol Augustine.

In the spotlight of the Obirin Show is the folk-singing group of Jeff Lamont, Karen Smith, Greg Lamont, and Art Erdmann.

A small group from Treble Choir performs "The Telephone Hour" from Bye-Bye Birdie for the benefit of the Obirin Show audience.

Obirin Show finances South American school

Profits from the Obirin Show did not go to LT's sister school in Japan this year, but instead helped finance a school in South America. Director Karen Soria and student organizers Pete King from North Campus and Fran Dye from South Campus were aided by faculty advisers Mrs. Linda Anderson and Mrs. Joyce Meacham to create an entertaining show.

Presenting the traditional folk singing groups, pianists, and comedy performances, the Obirin Show also utilized several new techniques in performance. Using the modern method of involving the total audience, performers were placed throughout the theatre. Two experimental theatre plays, "A Beautiful Day" and "The Tridget of Greva," added a different touch of modern-day theatre to the production.

Curious Savage finds normal people in insane asylum

The contrast between selflessness and greed was explored in depth in John Patrick's Curious Savage, the first South Campus Play. The cruelty of the children toward the central character, Mrs. Savage, is finally revenged when she triumphs over their deceit. She works to prove her sanity and overcome her grown children's efforts to place her in an institution and gain access to her wealth.

Director Mrs. Holstein worked with the cast and crew to establish a modern day atmosphere. Stagecraft classes worked on the scenery which involved such extremes as a comfortable living room and an austere cloister in a mental hospital. Make-up and props had to relay these various moods, as did the costumes, which were procured by the cast.

Supporting Roles: Jim Milio, Marie McNellis, Jan LaPointe, Rich Pine, Maryanne Ciolek.

Under the interrogation of her greedy children, Mrs. Savage only becomes more secretive about the whereabouts of her fortune.

During a get-acquainted tea party at the asylum, Mrs. Savage explains her situation to the other inmates and declares she is perfectly sane.

Daisy Durdle responds rather coldly to her ex-boyfriend's attempts at charming her.

The shy doctor requires a bit of coaching from three ghostly cupids before he can summon the courage to kiss Daisy.

Ghosts populate SC stage in Lo and Behold

Haunting spirits and an unusual suicide were combined with romance in the second South Campus Play, Lo and Behold, by John Patrick. Revolving around such intriguing characters such as seventy-year old Milo Alcott and his maid Daisy Durdle, the plot involves the interference of Milo's ghost in the engagement of his deceiving heiress to his former doctor.

Mr. Albright supervised the staging of the play, which was set in Milo's home library in New York. A touch of comedy was added by the presence of ghosts. Special efforts had to be made to arrange the actors to achieve the invisible but present effect of spirits. Costuming, organized and gathered by the cast, was well adapted to the personalities and tastes of the characters.

'70 Corral Show gets down to real Nitty Gritty

Running out of fairy tales to parody, the '70 Corral Show focused its attention on pollution in the modern world. Nitty Gritty presented scenes not only on air and water pollution, but also on pollution of the mind and body. Fads, television, pornography, and drugs were satirically viewed. The scenes were tied together by theme only, and this situation called for an increased number of lead and bit parts.

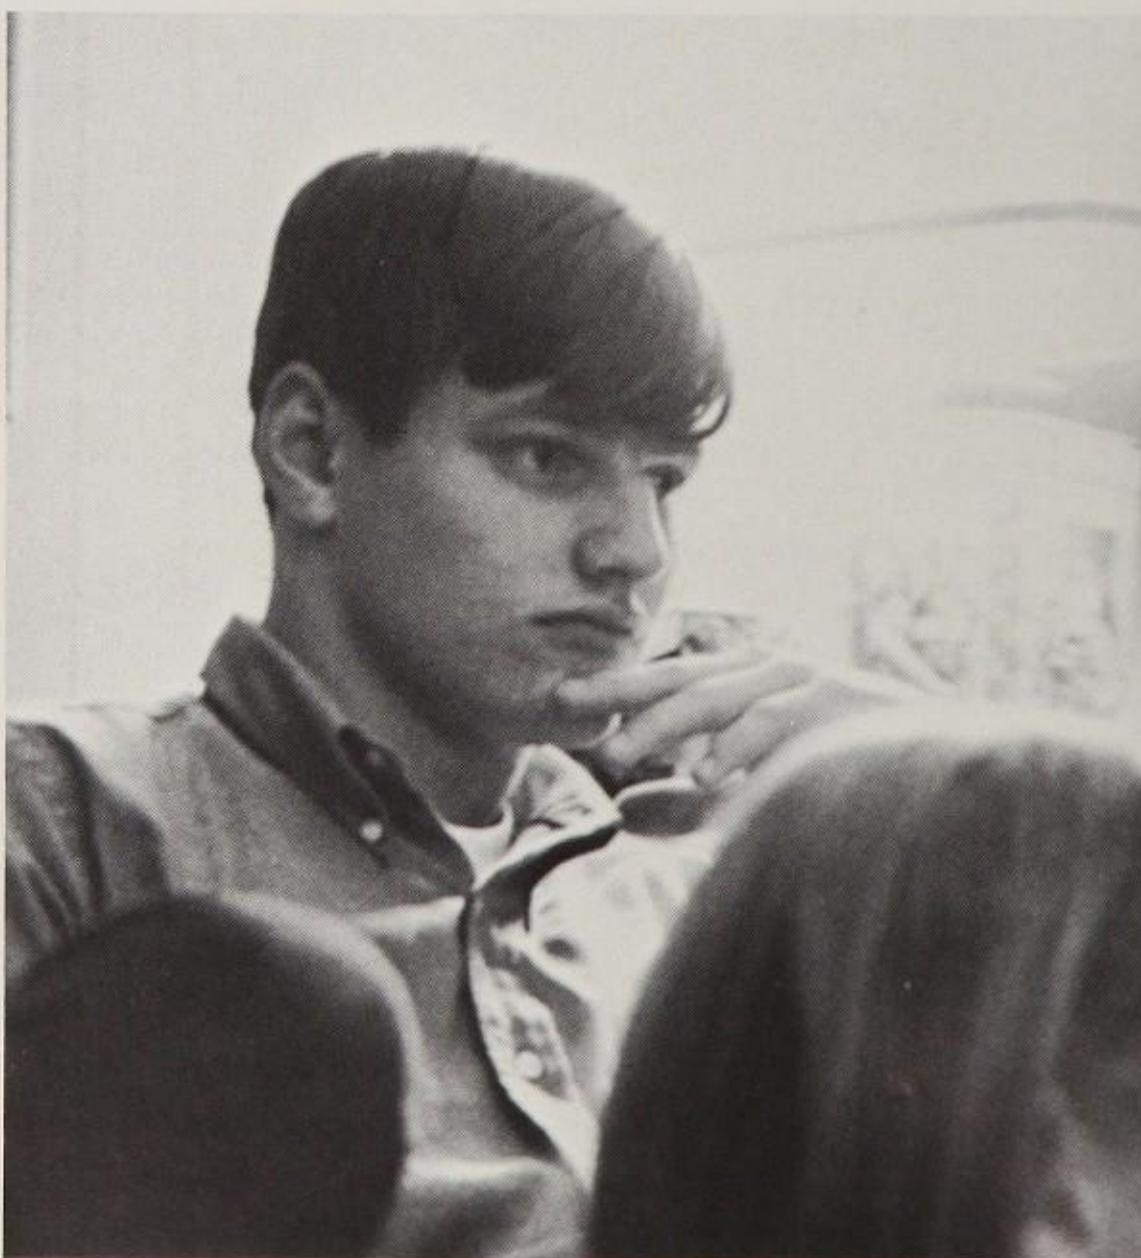

Because of the large number of people involved in the production of the show, coordinating the schedule was an enormous task. Beginning in December, the writers and the student directors met twice weekly with the adult director, Mr. David Thompson. After tryouts were held in March, the actors and chorus lines started rehearsals immediately. The various committee chairmen also got to work, making arrangements for publicity, program, props, costumes, and the other vital parts of the show. The efforts of all were successfully culminated in May, when the show was presented before a record auditorium crowd.

Using the Corral for rehearsals, Gary Biewenga and Jane Taaffe go through the steps for the scene in the Garden of Eden.

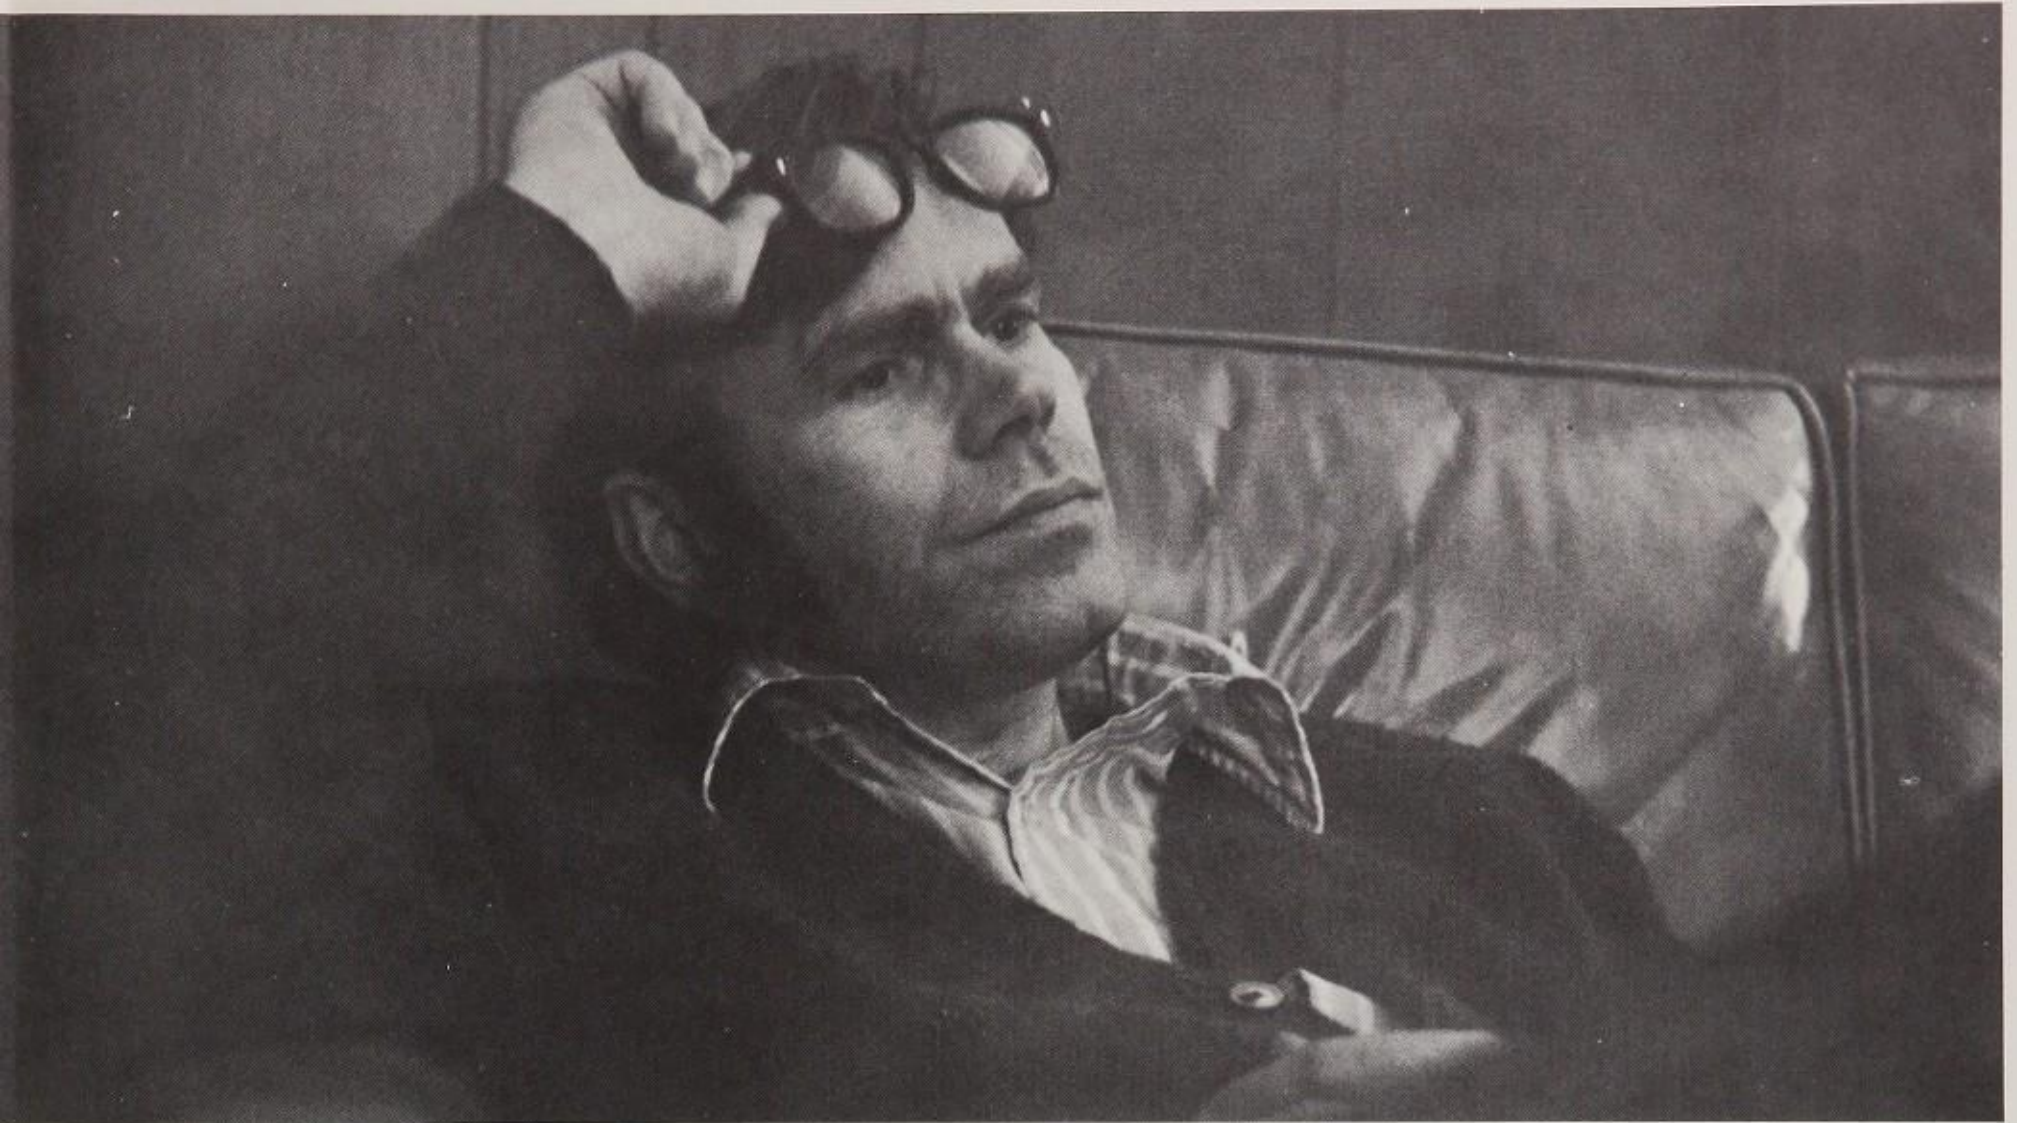

Visualizing the show on stage, Dee Reinhart attempts to explain the necessity of script revision.

Before putting together a complete and unified show, director Dick Rediehs must consider many ideas from the writers.

Relaxing from the pressure of producing LT's largest and most complicated show, Mr. David Thompson thinks about the needed improvements after a night's rehearsal.

ORGANIZATIONS

Clubs are formed quietly
by people who just want to meet to talk about something they share or to do something that they feel needs to be done.
From the informal meetings
come membership drives, dues,
elections and service projects;
but the original purpose
is still there,
is still what draws interest
and makes new members come.
There seems to be
a club for nearly everyone,
a place to be after school
with friends for a talk;
and if there isn't one,
it soon seems to appear wherever a few gather
with some one common goal.
It may be hard to find
the right organization for you,
but you can join what you want
and make it what you want.

Student Council opens leadership opportunities

In planning and executing policies, Student Council stressed participation on the part of the individual student. Council opened its standing committees to all interested students, and officers say that an increase in school pride and spirit was the reward for those who became involved.

Student Council took charge of Homecoming, Christmas Dance, Spring Dance, and Club Carnival. Each event's planning was precise; each possessed something unique. Student Council made many improvements: a student lounge was opened at North Campus; a student-faculty relations board was set up to better communications; a sixty-foot wall mural, depicting all school sports, was painted in a cafeteria. The student dress code was discarded. Student Council also worked closely with the committee investigating revision of the school constitution.

Waiting for the lunch-time voter rush, citizenship committee members check lists for early guess at voting percentages.

Adding to the colorful murals characterizing LT sports, the Cafeteria Beautification Committee inspects the art work done on the school emblem before mounting it in the middle North Campus cafeteria.

The necessity of revamping student government is investigated by Rep Assembly secretaries.

Thorough research by Rep Assembly starts LT Con-Con

Throughout the year Representative Assembly worked for the improvement of communications and mutual responsibility among students, their representatives, and the administration.

This year the group began a revision of the student constitution. The first step was to set up a constitution-investigating committee consisting of Rep Assembly secretaries, interested students, and concerned faculty. Because of its depth and importance, the revision of the constitution is expected to be continued into next year.

The possibility of revamping the structure of Rep Assembly itself was also seriously discussed.

Chosen by lottery to be a secretary for student government evaluation, Tom Burke solicits participation in the program.

AFS students keep Foreign Relations busy

Foreign Relations worked closely with LT's foreign students in order to help each one become actively involved in student activities. They introduced the students to the Student Council and to the faculty during the first days of school. So that their guests would be able to meet other foreign students, Foreign Relations hosted a tea in December for more than thirty foreign students in the area. Excursions to Chicago for plays, concerts, and museums, as well as trips to nearby points of interest, were frequent.

While they were working to make this year's foreign student program a success, the committee members were also looking to the future. The annual AFS drive was successful in selling enough shares for two foreign students next year. The committee then undertook a drive of churches and organizations in the LT community to raise enough money to finance two additional foreign students next year.

During a stopover in LaGrange on their way to Washington D.C., AFS students relax on the grass behind South Campus to enjoy a picnic.

Business Management moves into new fieldhouse home

Business Management Committee provided Student Council with its main source of income. In addition to selling food and drinks at home football and basketball games, the committee sold LT bookcovers, folders, and decals on registration day and supplied soft drinks for club meetings, dances, and mixers. Sponsors Mr. Robert Paolicchi and Mr. French Flynn distributed applications for the committee so that any interested student might become involved. This year Emily Johnson and Mark Layer co-ordinated the activities.

Girls' Club plans events to welcome St. Pat's, May Day

Two innovative projects plus the expected annual activities helped make this year's Girls' Club, with president Kathy Lavidge and sponsor Miss Betty Stine at North Campus and chairman Sue Swade and sponsor Miss Germaine Olson at South Campus, a successful undertaking.

A St. Patrick's Day mixer and a May Day Queen contest headed the list of new events for this year. The traditional Bow Day, King of Hearts dance, fashion show, and freshman mother-daughter tea were also conducted by Girls' Club.

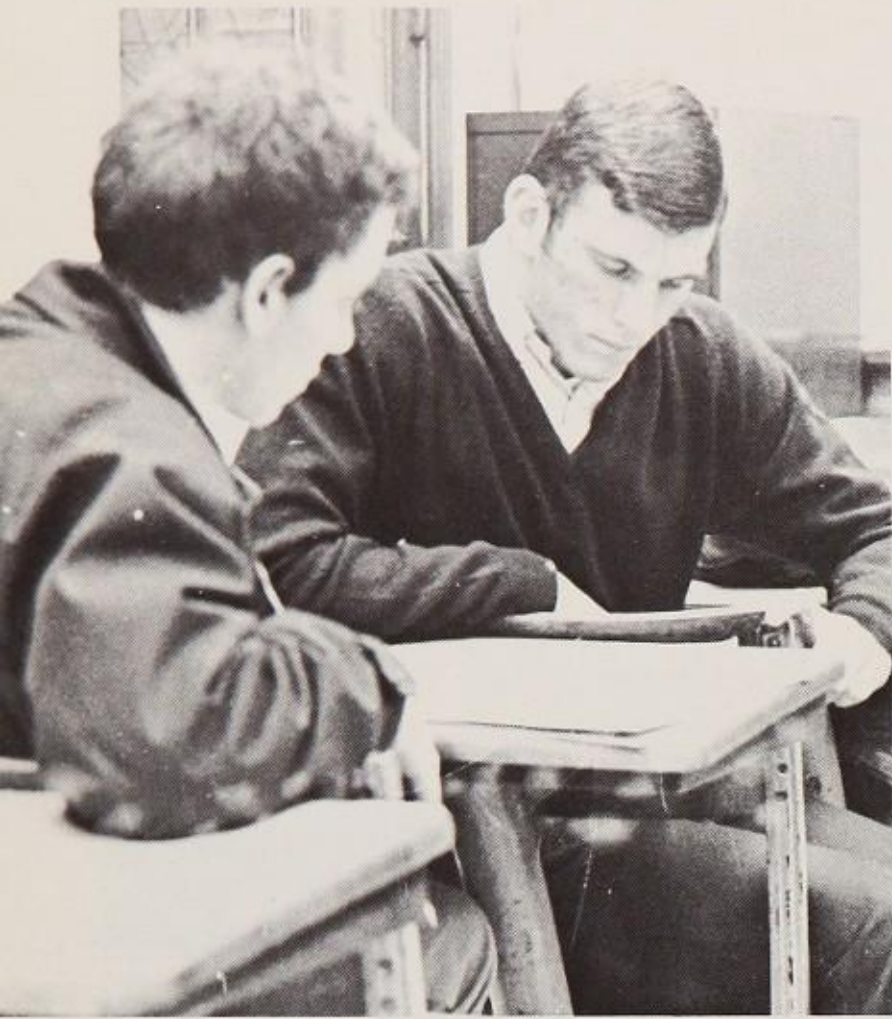

The volunteer service of girls at the Community Thrift Shop in LaGrange was added to the service projects for the year. Club members staged four holiday parties at the East Side Day Nursery for small children. The service year was augmented by the annual March of Dimes and CARE drives.

Boys' Club president Bob Marshall and secretary Jay Barnett find that careful planning is necessary to insure a large turnout for the annual Bulls basketball trip.

Board proposes, discusses, plans Boys' Club events

To serve the school and community and to give opportunity for leadership are the aims of Boys' Club. President Bob Marshall and sponsors Mr. Jon Weber, Mr. Gregory Bolden, Mr. Jerry Craven, Mr. William Dawson, and Mr. Richard Ringhofer guided the board, which was composed of boys elected from each class, in its decisions and plans for the various projects throughout the year.

The student directory, published annually, provided the main source of income for the club's operation, besides being a helpful reference source for LT students in their search for phone numbers and addresses. As in past years, Boys' Club co-sponsored a Homecoming float with Girls' Club, a project which stimulated the involvement of students from all classes.

In February fifty boys attended a Chicago Bulls basketball game. March was the month of the Boys' Club dance, which drew the interest and participation of many LT students.

Frosh benefit from experienced Discussion Leaders

Providing counseling and good advice to the freshman class, the Senior Discussion Leaders started off the year by introducing the inexperienced students to the spirit and excitement of Homecoming week.

Topics for the guidance discussions were chosen on the basis of what would best aid the freshmen in their understanding of the complexities of high school life. Subjects such as a change in the student association and sound advice on "what I know as a senior that I wish I had known as a freshman" were given. The seniors were chosen by sponsor Mr. Tom Hansen and chairman Liz Peterson on the basis of their high school record and leadership abilities.

Increased Corral budget finances added 'big names'

Aiming to offer what LT students would like in a student-owned organization, the 1969-70 Corral Board initiated several interesting features. Big Nites presenting such popular groups as The Buckingham and Crow were made possible by an increased entertainment budget. The showing of Laurel and Hardy films and the plan to show a full-length motion picture interested many members who had previously had little desire to take advantage of Corral's facilities.

Fall and winter workshops were held for the board members to discuss such matters as program and discipline problems. In addition to its own entertainment program, the Corral aided the community through donations of food taken in place of an admission fee, the food being given at Christmas time to the Community Nursing Center.

Once again this year, the Corral Show was a successful money-raiser for the upkeep of the building. The board was also responsible for keeping the Corral clean, a job which board members say was not always an easy one.

The ultimate goal of the board's planning was to make the Corral more than a last resort entertainment spot for students with nothing better to do on a weekend night, but rather an appreciated youth center which is the pride of the whole school and the community.

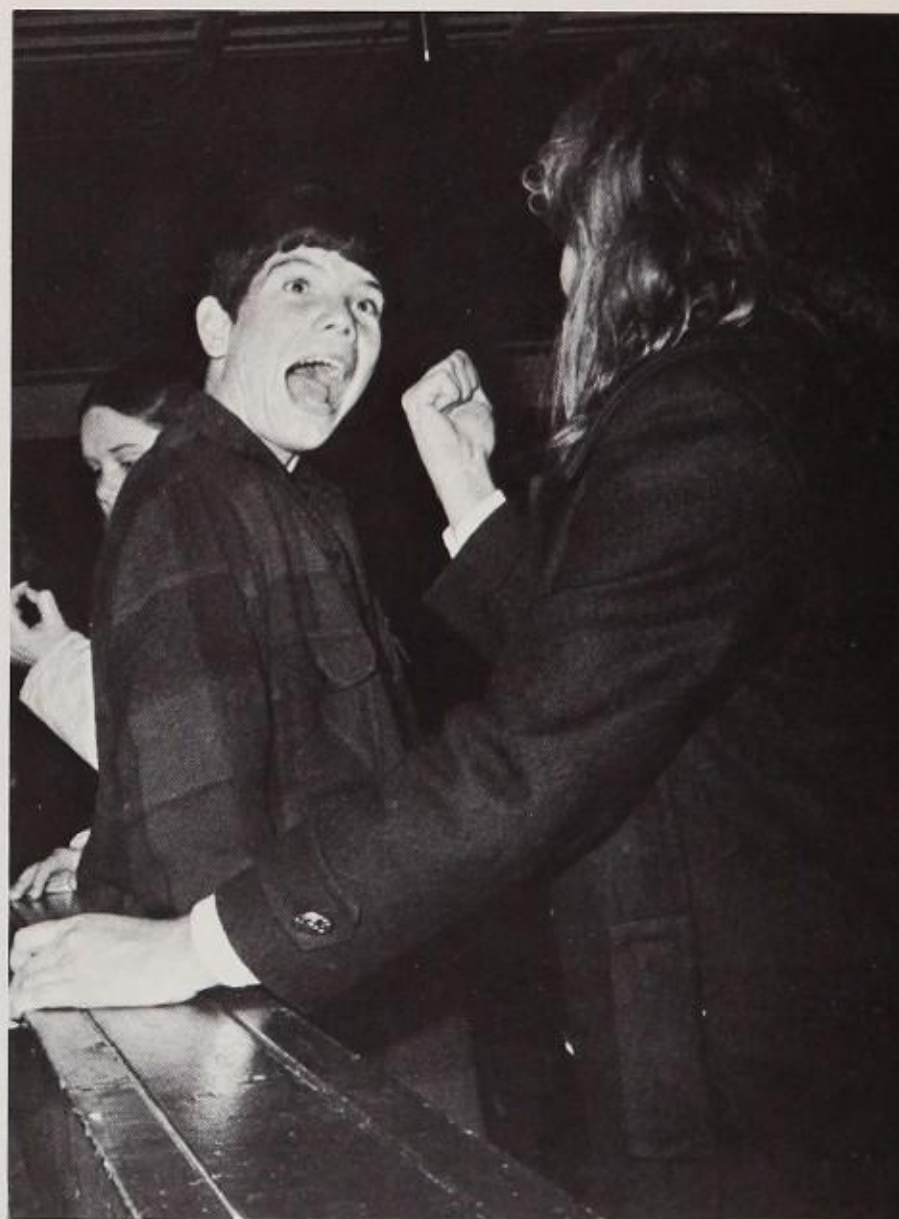

Temporarily escaping from the normal weekend crowd of LT students, the Corral hosts a party during the AFS bus stop.

Key Club sells jungle helmets to berserk fans

Furnishing service to the school and the community was a full job for Key Club. Sponsored by Mr. Bert Kraus and Mr. Scott Wilseck, Key Club started the year by collecting soap for patients at Dixon State Hospital. They donated money to CARE as well as to AFS.

To enlarge their treasury, they sold peanut brittle and white pith helmets at basketball games. In January they collected for the March of Dimes.

To offset their muscle-work, Key Club invited guest speakers to several meetings. Being part of Kiwanis, Key Club also helped with that organization's service activities.

Interact sponsors LT-RB faculty basketball game

In its fourth year Interact nearly doubled its size by allowing girls to have membership. A service organization, Interact undertook as its first project the selling of gold and blue seat cushions at the LT games. Several other projects were coordinated by president Chuck Nielsen and sponsors Mr. Robert Fletcher and Mr. Richard Ellis. The projects included the sending of goods to an Indian center at Christmas, ushering at LT productions, and sponsoring an LT-RB faculty basketball game.

The Mid-State Convention was the final project planned by Interact members. It involved a meeting in which Interact clubs from several states came together to form as an international service club serving many on a larger scale.

Forum presents unusual speakers, topic discussions

Continuing its tradition of offering members provocative speakers on contemporary issues, Forum, under the direction of president Norman LaForce and sponsor Mr. Ken Ludington, gave students opportunities to consider all aspects of a variety of questions. Forum's unusual newsletter informed members of the appearance of such figures as Senator Charles Percy and Lieutenant Governor Paul Simon.

Both sides of the Arab-Israeli conflict were presented at two meetings. Perpetual candidate Lar Daley returned to voice his opinion on political affairs. Club members also participated in community affairs by helping to promote the Con-Con election.

Honors reward speech team's diligent effort

Sending more contestants to tournaments this year was LT's goal in the 1969-70 Speech Contest season. At various tournaments and contests, under the instruction of Mr. Frank Stacey, many LT students were able to win high honors.

The 1969-70 season began with the West Suburban Conference at Maine East on November 8, at which LT earned a second place standing. After a busy winter schedule which included a trip to Normal for the University High School Tournament, LT participants entered the state contest on February 14 and proceeded to the sectionals on February 28. Eligibility for the state finals at Normal on April 3 and 4 was based on victories gained at these contests.

The basic categories in the contests entered were after-dinner speaking, extemporaneous speaking, comedy reading, original oration, original monologue, oratorical declamation, radio speaking, verse reading, prose reading, and serious reading. LT also entered students in speech contests such as the Voice of Democracy and the American Legion oratorical contest.

Debate team discusses US foreign policy

Starting the year early, the Debate Team, headed by coaches Mr. Donald Childs and Mr. James Waage, was prepared for stiff competition. This year, every member of the team researched the topic, "RESOLVED: That Congress should prohibit United States unilateral military intervention in foreign countries," which was debated in numerous competitive high school debates.

Meeting three or four times a week, the novice, sub-varsity, and varsity squads began researching evidence cards, contriving arguments, and attending frequent after-school debates as preparation for the state tournament which climaxed the end of the season. The team participated in the West Suburban Conference, Northern Illinois University, Illinois State University, and University of Illinois tournaments.

Having skillfully organized the mass of source material collected over many months, the affirmative team Rick Shepro and Robert Edwards methodically review their case before plotting their rebuttal.

Through experience at many contests, varsity debaters learn the value of well-stocked files of resource cards.

Games, skits help 'forgotten people' to find themselves

Aware, concerned, and interested aptly describe Students for People. Early fall activities included a club-sponsored dance featuring The Ides of March. Profits from the event were spent on the weekly transportation of members to the Chicago State Hospital, their best-known service program. The club provided and performed various forms of entertainment for the in-patients of the hospital's geriatric and pediatric wards. Games, skits, and crafts offered the patients opportunities to communicate with themselves and others to gain a sense of belonging.

Later in the year, members, under the leadership of president Sandy Carlberg, anticipated branching out into other projects which would further the relations among people. They planned inner-city work to expand not only their own experiences, but also those of the people with whom they came in contact.

Quill and Scroll candlelight ritual initiates members

Outstanding members of Lion and Tab staffs were chosen for membership in this year's Quill and Scroll. Advisers Mrs. Jane Bicek and Miss Kay Keefe nominated prospective members from the editorial boards of the two major school publications for this honor.

The spring initiation dinner had a traditional ceremony including lighting candles, taking the journalistic oath, and signing the roster by the new members. Pins were awarded to the journalists to signify their membership in the international honorary society.

Earning their Quill and Scroll awards by laboring over newly-arrived formals, Tab photo editors check for flaws and familiar faces.

Pen and Inklings publishes student literary work

Responding to an interest expressed by students not associated with the publication, Pen and Inklings tried many new ideas and changes. This year's staff strove to make it more of a magazine of the students by trying to get a larger number of students to contribute to and read the publication.

The magazine featured student contributions in the fields of literature, art, and photography, and this year tried to include more entries in the latter two areas. Another change was that the English teachers did not have to approve material before it was submitted to the editors, who selected for publication what they considered the best of the material handed in.

Miss Norma Easter served as sponsor for the first time, and Paul Nelson was editor-in-chief of an expanded staff.

Lion strives to inform student body, faculty

The Lion maintained for another year the high standards of journalism which students, faculty, and the community expect of LT's newspaper. Under the direction of editors Bob McClain and Art Erdmann and adviser Miss Kay Keefe, Journalism II students wrote, directed, and produced the paper; and juniors in English IIIJ assisted by writing articles, headlines, and captions. Out-of-class volunteers also helped write the Lion and stories for Press Bureau, the school news source for local papers.

A Christmas advertiser and a fashion supplement were among the highlights of the Lion year. Senior editors attended two conventions to further their knowledge of journalism. Press Bureau aimed to have 1500 articles printed in the local papers.

A panel of Lion seniors was invited to speak about their work before the North Central Association, which accredits high schools in this region. The panel also spoke before a group of west suburban high school principals.

Tabulae records impressions, events of 1970

No other room in all of LT can boast the personality of the Tabulae office, home of the yearbook. It is not simply a shell of utility as are most rooms in the school, for it is literally inhabited. The characters of the editors, the staff, and adviser Mrs. Jane Bicek soon fused with the room, making an atmosphere homey to the point of being a dump. Despite the mess, few other rooms witness such strenuous efforts as those expended in producing the yearbook, the complete published record of the year.

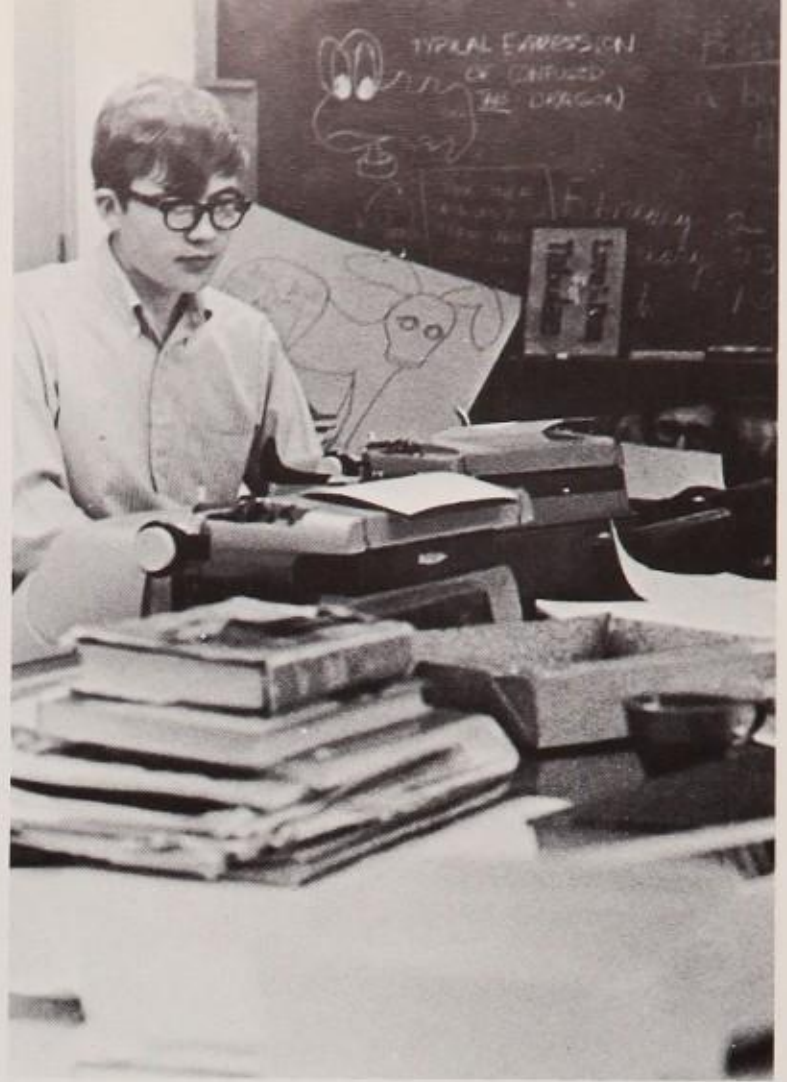

The junk strewn about the room tells the story of the year. Endless photos smudged with cropping lines await the descriptive words of a caption. Typewriters, battered by constant use, hold half-written copy and headlines. Stacks of layouts, schedules, and lists incredibly disappear, only to be found after a frantic search. A dusty blackboard bears forgotten reminders and incomprehensible graffiti.

The strain of attempting innovations, the necessity for organization, and the desire for quality can be appreciated by only a few. As the dedicated staff has discovered, "Tab is not an activity . . . it is a way of life."

With pica ruler in hand, art editor Gail Klitchman prepares to change layouts according to the needs of other departments.

As eighty-page deadlines keep cropping up every three weeks, coordinating editors Sherry Withers and Jean Launspach type and proofread endless senior write-ups.

Theatre Board, Thespians recognize talented actors

Theatrical efforts at both campuses were marked by increased participation and extremely popular performances. To give members valuable experience in the planning and production of plays, the South Campus Theatre Board was formed, replacing Drama Club. Sponsored by Mrs. Judith Holstein and Mr. Richard Albright, the board emphasized learning stagecraft by participation in sound and lighting, ushers, props, or costumes and make-up committees, and by producing two major plays, The Curious Savage and Lo and Behold.

Several successful productions gave evidence of the efficiency and team-work of the North Campus Theatre Board, sponsored by Miss Donna Mavros. Chairmen and workers from each of the seven committees spent much time preparing the cast and stage for presentation. Stagecraft classes worked creatively to adapt the stage to numerous time and setting situations. Costumes and props volunteers complemented this work by providing appropriate atmosphere for the plays. Ushers and ticket committees found it necessary to handle SRO crowds.

Using a nationally based point system as criteria for selection, the '69-'70 Thespians were recognized for their achievements in the dramatic arts. Mr. David Thompson, the sponsor, and previously elected members assigned points to the candidates for work in all aspects of theatre, chiefly with Theatre Board. Those earning twelve points were elected for initiation into the national organization in the spring. An invitation to a banquet, where new members were asked to display their talents imaginatively, was extended to all Thespians.

The success of Theatre Board productions depends on ticket sales as well as the quality of a performance.

Latin II members combine talents to entertain elderly

Latin II Club changed its objectives under the supervision of Miss Susan Sobey, new this year at LT. At the first meeting in October, elections were held and members discussed the year's activities. A committee organized and directed the annual Christmas party. In addition to the party, the club adopted an underprivileged family for the holidays.

Later in the year, a talent show was held to entertain the residents of a senior citizens' home. In the spring, for the finale to the year's events, the Roman-style banquet, was held.

In the spring, Cicero-Virgil sponsored a booth at the Club Carnival. The climax to the year was the annual Roman Banquet, held in conjunction with the South Campus Latin Club, which utilized Latin I students as slaves.

Necessary for a good meal in a German restaurant is the comprehension of a menu written completely in a foreign language.

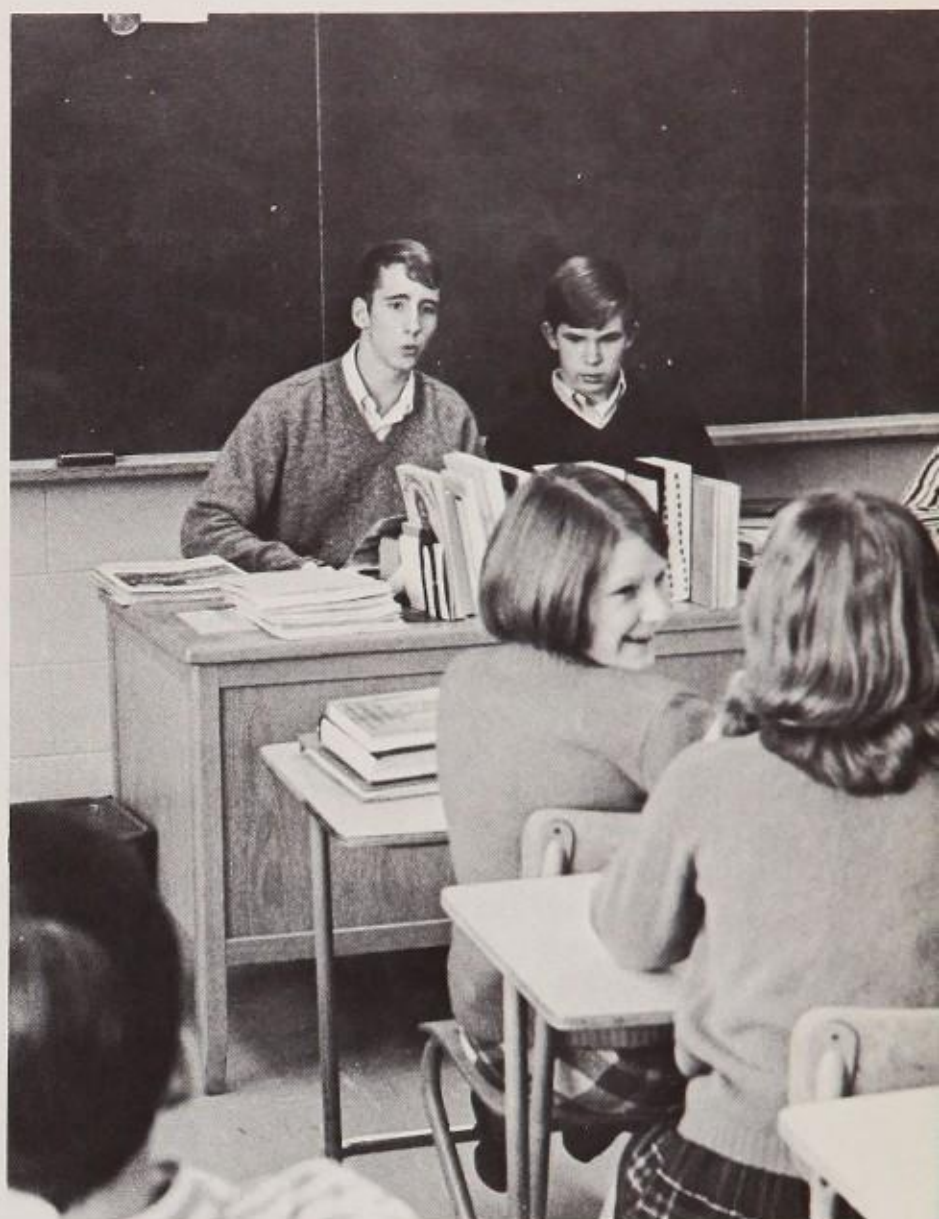

German Club field trips test language skills

Seeking to provide German students with conversational practice, this year's German Club opened the year with an initiation for new members of the club. Also featured was AFS student Tom Elser, who showed slides of his hometown in Germany. The annual Christmas party included satirical skits, a concert by Tom Brierly on his banjo, and refreshments.

Under the direction of president Don Lipskis and sponsors Miss Ingeborg Hill and Mr. Albert Hoch, the club officers made plans for the traditional root beer and pretzels booth at the Club Carnival. Closing the year, members traveled to a North Side German restaurant to sample authentic German cuisine. After the dinner, they viewed a full-length German movie to test their translation skills.

Spanish club catches flavor of south-of-border

The principle that the culture of Spanish-speaking countries is best learned by seeing it in action dominated the activities of El Circulo Espanol. The North Campus Spanish club was headed this year by Candy O'Brien. In the fall, members were invited to hear AFS student Ruben Odriezola speak of the life and culture of Argentina, his home. Mexican culture was the interest of the club-sponsored trip to Chicago's "Fiesta Mexicana."

Breaking from the traditional Christmas pinata party, the club collected and distributed toys, clothing, and food to Puerto Rican centers in the inner-city. Club members taped and presented a Christmas program of Spanish carols on WLTL. Movies in the spring also added to the students' understanding of Spanish-speaking people.

Club samples several aspects of Russian culture

Russian culture consists of more than the Red Square and Marxist writings, as this year's Russian Club members discovered under the direction of president Tim Loats and sponsor Mr. Frank Petronaitis. The Christmas potluck dinner and the authentic Russian banquet at the end of the year contributed to members' appreciation of foreign food, while seeing the movie War and Peace and a visit to a Russian church gave them more insight into Russian culture. Highlights of the year included a performance of the Kalinka Dancers and a chance to see the Balalaika Orchestra in Chicago.

Folk Music Club sponsors first LT folk festival

Folk Music Club staged a very successful Folk Festival program for the first time in November of this year. Members decided to concentrate their energies on the folk music program instead of building the customary Homecoming float.

Another of the club's activities, coordinated by president Cari Sincora, was a Christmas program which involved members of the group playing in local churches. At Club Carnival the club constructed a coffee house in which the members provided entertainment for the customers.

At their bi-monthly meetings, attended by fifty students, the members heard recordings of folk songs and exhibited their progress by playing what they had learned for the group.

Home Ec members model handmade spring fashions

Described by president Sue Foster as "a fun club," South Campus's Home Ec Club provided a varied calendar of activities for its members. Beginning the year by building a Homecoming float with North Campus Home Ec, club members continued a busy year with service projects, a baking contest, and a fashion show. In addition to these annual activities, new ideas for projects and speakers were incorporated into the program. Sponsors Mrs. Helen Hlinka at South Campus and Mrs. Nancy Hoaglin at North Campus worked to keep the two branches of the club related.

In North Campus Home Ec Club, president Diane Harris organized a career panel in which a student teacher, an LT graduate majoring in home ec, and others discussed possible opportunities for a home ec major in business. The annual Christmas boutique sold students last minute presents. A flower demonstration and an Easter egg coloring demonstration brightened up the spring, followed by a fashion show in which home ec students modeled clothes they had made during the year. The club visited The Cradle orphanage and training school in Evanston. Watching and helping the nurses provided more experience for the members. In March, Health Careers visited Mt. Sinai Hospital to further their learning about medicine.

Sponsors Mrs. Patricia Wilson and Mrs. Ada Skarda both stressed the point that Health Careers is open to boys as well as girls, and that much more is involved than just nursing. Speakers at the meetings explained the work of doctors, veterinarians, physical therapists, and social workers. A broad and diversified organization has been growing in LT's Health Careers club.

VICA, I00A members discuss work experiences

To complement the experiences gained by working in the Co-operative Office Education program, the Illinois Office Occupations Association (I00A) prepared members to face problems in the secretarial field.

To initiate the members into the group, an introductory banquet was held in November. In a classroom situation, sponsor Mrs. Ruth Wernett and president Jane Troeger supervised the discussions of personality and human relations. Films and speakers pertinent to these problems were featured during school-time meetings. After a year of vocational preparations, a banquet was held by the members in honor of their employers.

To serve students who participate in the industrial work programs, Mr. Roger Jaacks organized the LT branch of the Vocational Interests Club of America (VICA) early in February. Discussions of work-related experiences were held in conjunction with the distributive education classes.

Food Service, Distributive Ed plan vocations

The Distributive Education club, in its first year at LT, provided students with experience in retail sales clerk positions. Operated on a part-time-school part-time-job basis, the club automatically included the thirteen students taking the course taught by Mr. Robert Paulsen.

During the year the students also frequently made field trips to such places as the Merchandise Mart in Chicago. State meetings were held for all Distributive Education members, as well as competition in displays and sales demonstrations.

In the second year of its existence, Food Service, a vocational club, expanded its program and instituted new projects. Members were part of a work program through which they were employed in establishments such as restaurants and hospitals. The club's major projects included making a cookbook, going on field trips, and participated in the National Restaurant Association convention in Chicago. A banquet attended by students, parents, and employees climaxed the year.

ARS, Art Club plan art fair, sketch trips

The Artistically Rebellious Students of South Campus (ARS) continued their tradition of incorporating many aspects of art into their program during the year. The first semester was devoted primarily to making a film, although activities such as sketch trips were not neglected. President Katy Dolk and sponsor Miss Joan Kir-Stimon encouraged club members to concentrate on individualized projects during the second semester, such as making trinkets for Club Carnival and working on entries for the annual art fair.

Although off to a late start, Art Club offered North Campus art enthusiasts a variety of activities. President Missy Ristig and sponsor Mrs. Sharon Mareska helped members plan a trip to the Art Institute to see the Rembrandt exhibit, as well as the usual sketch trips. Guest speakers and creative workshops were important parts of regular meetings most of the year, although spring meetings were spent preparing for the art fair.

An impromptu musical performance by a fellow Mu Tau member draws the constructive criticism of club president Craig Williams.

LT music lovers unite, perform, enjoy field trips

Student musicians and vocalists who enjoy informal performances found an outlet in Mu Tau. Under the leadership of president Craig Williams and vice-president Barb Johnson, the forty members held a talent display at one of their monthly meetings and entertained their friends musically at others. For members interested in listening to music, the group attended the opera, Don Giovanni, and went to several concerts at Orchestra Hall. The final event of the year was the club's second production of "Up with People" at Club Carnival.

Strategic planning clears the path for a successful move in a game of chess.

Bridge, Chess clubs invite both amateur, skilled

Chess Club began its year with a preliminary tournament to determine its ten top players, who then represented LT in the first meet of the West Suburban Chess Conference. Matches played during the bi-weekly meetings re-determined those who would be in the upcoming meets. This allowed more members to participate as first-string players, and also served as an incentive in the games within the club. Sponsored by Mr. Ron Anderson and led by president Bill Giffrow, this club gave both the beginning and the advanced players an opportunity to match wits with fellow chess enthusiasts.

Bridge Club also was open to both experienced and amateur players. Sponsor Mrs. Zilpha Fields and president John St. Germaine spent the first few months teaching beginners the fundamentals of the game, while the more advanced players brushed up on strategy. At the bi-weekly meetings participants drew lots to select partners, and the play began, the hands sometimes being pre-dealt to test skill rather than luck. By December, all the club members were proficient enough to begin a tournament, which was continued throughout the year.

Clubs unite LT hobbyists, promote new participation

School-sponsored clubs offered a regular meeting place for students with outside interests to discuss their hobbies with fellow enthusiasts. Stamp and Coin Club added a number of new members from the incoming freshman class. Under the direction of Neal Bratschun, president, and sponsor Mrs. Jean Dons, members of the club exhibited their collections to one another and discussed what factors make stamps and coins valuable. The highlight of the year was a lecture by a professional stamp and coin collector.

This year, Scott Franzen and sponsor Mr. Jack Shouba presided over the activities of the Camera Club. Members spent much time perfecting techniques in the darkroom and occasionally watched films from the Kodak Company concerning photography. As in the past, the club sponsored an open photography contest at the close of the school year.

At an informal meeting after school, Stamp and Coin Club members examine a rare find while waiting for the official meeting to start.

Illuminated by the viewer, Mr. Shouba's pictures show techniques for special photographic effects.

Conservation Club members research pollution control

One of LT's new clubs this year, Conservation Club grew from a group of students interested in fighting pollution and working on other conservation projects. Under the sponsorship of biology teachers Mr. Kenneth Nelson and Miss Mary Ann Bulger, the club completed its first project in October, the cleaning of the biology pond at South Campus for the winter. The club then looked into the possibility of raising rabbits near the pond.

President Marianne Jahnke made plans for the club to visit the Milwaukee Zoo where revolutionary means of exhibiting animals are being introduced and also to a game run to investigate raising pheasants. The club enjoyed a canoe trip and several hikes. A smaller group within the club worked on pollution research projects supported by club funds.

Students speak at Bi-Phy-Chem, Astro-Science

Bi-Phy-Chem and Astro-Science Seminar, both presided over by Bob Burchsted, provided an outlet for science-oriented students. Bi-Phy-Chem met once a week in the AP chemistry room at North Campus under the supervision of Mr. Donald Axelson. Talks by members and occasional movies comprised the usual meetings. The club did research as a group on polywater, a recent find of chemical research. A field trip to Argonne National Laboratories climaxed the year's activities.

Students interested in astronomy participated in Astro-Science Seminar activities. More star watches were planned for the club this year. Members gave reports at weekly meetings in Mr. William Clevenger's room at South Campus and built extra attachments for the club's telescope.

In going beyond the usual classroom explanations, these two clubs provided an involvement for those interested in exploring science to their own contentment.

WLTL broadcasts to mixed audience, instructs students

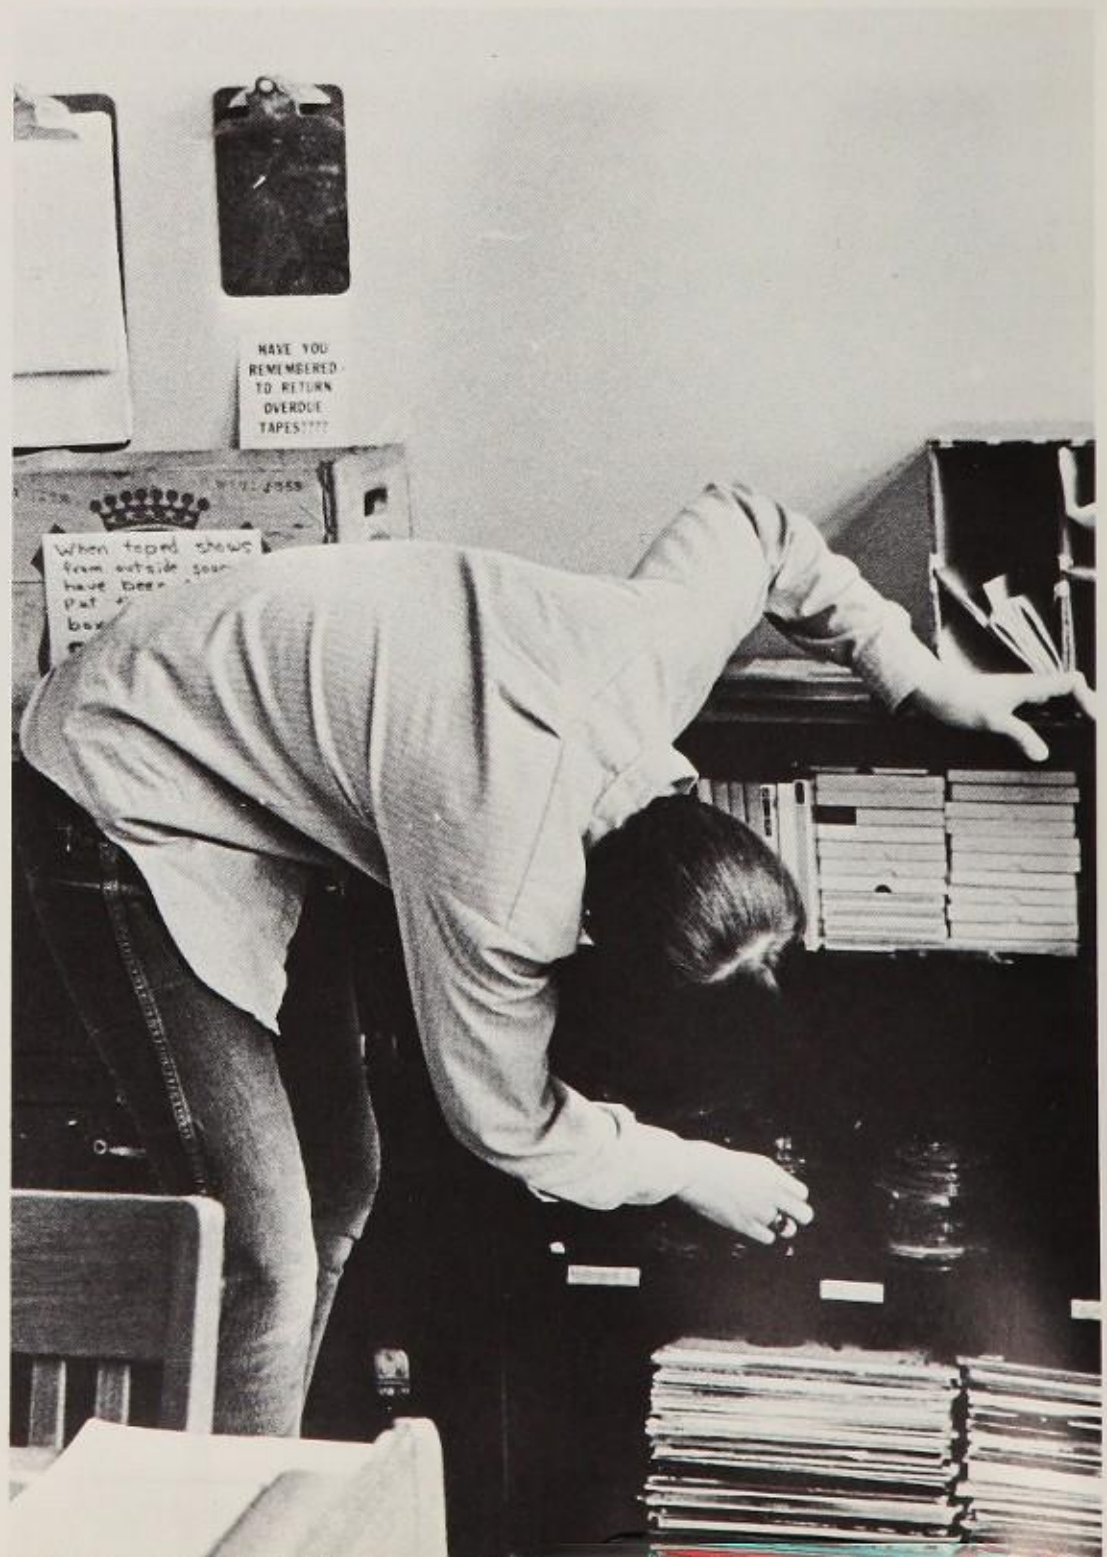

Greater involvement was achieved this year on WLTL staff by having almost all live student programs rather than recorded tapes. Using more live programs was made possible because there were more staff members than in the past. Student individuality was highlighted in single-student programs. These included a blues show and a soul hour.

An experimental radio-TV class was broadcast over WLTL. The purpose was to make listeners more familiar with what programing and broadcasting involves.

President Anne Bown and sponsor Miss Catherine Ott provided as guest speaker WCFL's Clark Weber who spoke on the career of radio announcing. WLTL also broadcast a tape of Senator Percy's speech made at LT.

Effective coverage of all home basketball games and some away games was accomplished. Being on the air six days a week gave broadcasters, as well as listeners, a better insight into professional broadcasting.

Before he goes on the air, a WLTL disc jockey collects the assorted tapes he will need for his upcoming broadcast.

In a meeting sponsored by WLTL, professional disc jockey Clark Weber of WCFL answers questions from the floor.

Radio Clubbers study techniques of ham operation

Transmitting and receiving the messages of other ham radio operators was the main activity of Radio Club members this year. In order that those interested might obtain their licenses, the club held training sessions with Morse code and radio theory being the basic points of instruction.

W9MTJ, the club's own ham radio station, provided actual broadcasting experience. The operation of the equipment by the members themselves was headquartered in Room 215 at North Campus. Mr. Orville Warning, the club's sponsor, helped all the members further their interests in amateur radio communication.

Model railroading, firearms interest club members

Inspired by a new practice range after two years without one because of construction, Rifle Club re-organized itself under the guidance of president Paul Thompson and sponsor Mr. William Clevenger.

This year members were encouraged to buy their own rifles; formerly guns and ammunition had been supplied by the Director of Civilian Marksmanship. Instructors certified by the National Rifle Association held two classes a week to teach members the correct use of their rifles. Rifle Club held a party in February to formally initiate members who had passed their marksmanship tests.

Under the guidance of president John Orwin and Mr. Scott Wilseck, LTSME gave members the chance to expand their knowledge of railroads and trains. Many meetings were spent either on field trips or looking at slides and pictures of various engines. The club sponsored auctions at which members could buy or trade for model engines that interested them. Other meetings were devoted to working on the miniature track layout in the basement at South Campus.

Gathering with a common interest in horses and riding, Saddle and Spur Club planned many activities during all seasons and weather conditions. Members had the opportunity to attend the horse show at the Amphitheatre in November, and got together for the traditional Christmas party in December. A sleigh ride and a visit to a horse-breeding farm offered winter-time participation for all who were interested. Members often gathered for picnics and riding in the forest preserves. The highlight of the year's efforts was a weekend riding excursion in Wisconsin in May.

Pep Club banners, sports spectacular boost LT spirit

Pep Club expanded into a two-campus organization this year to promote school spirit. The hoops and banners seen at football and basketball games were products of Pep Club's after-school activities. For the away games, a spirit bus was sponsored by the school, decorated as a club endeavor, and financed by the sale of mascot dolls.

The Winter Sports Assembly was produced by Pep Club in conjunction with the School Spirit Committee of Student Council. The assembly introduced the members of various sports teams and gave demonstrations of their skills.

The club also helped by decorating the locker rooms and by silkscreening the tags which inform students of upcoming sports events.

Destined to be torn to shreds by the team's entrance, the basketball hoop is carefully designed by Pep Club.

Ski Club takes to slopes for season of eventful runs

With ever-increasing interest in the sport of skiing, Ski Club enlarged its membership under the direction of sponsor Mr. Dennis Deegan and president Art Nerbonne. At meetings during the ski season, members discussed and planned after-school and weekend trips.

During December, King-Keyser of Hinsdale provided the clothes for a ski fashion show. January and February found the club members on day trips to Alpine Mountain in Wisconsin and weekend trips to Boyne Mountain in Michigan. In an effort to educate the novice members of the club to the safety precautions of skiing, a Ski Patrol instructor spoke to the club in February. Membership patches were replaced by pins which were worn to all club-sanctioned activities.

To assure their places on the trip to Alpine Valley, Ski Club members deliver their deposits to officers Pete King and Betsy Gits.

LT Guard provides pool service for school, community

Their second year at LT proved to be a rewarding one for the members of LT Guard. Under the supervision of sponsor Mr. John Weber and president Bill McGowan, the members of the club served as lifeguards for the student, faculty, and non-school swim events, and also as instructors for the Saturday morning swim lessons.

Their Homecoming float, entitled "Hill-toppers Take a Dive," won first place in its division. Club membership increased after each lifesaving course was completed at the pool, making LT Guard one of LT's newest and largest clubs.

Aquarians combine form, grace in water ballet show

With the long-awaited completion of the swimming pool at LT this year, Synchronized Swimming was initiated. Early in the fall, many applicants tried out for this year's water ballet team, and the thirty most qualified girls were selected to perform. The two sponsors, Miss Milda Cizauskas and Miss Catherine Ott, instructed the members in their aquatic routines.

The swimmers chose Aquarians as an appropriate term to identify their group. Practicing regularly on Tuesday nights, the Aquarians made plans in preparation for their debut at the water show in the spring.

Practicing for the first annual water show in the new pool, Synchronized Swim members exhibit their pinwheel routine.

Lettermen usher, time during Midlands Tourney

Always an active organization, Letterman's Club was unique in that its membership continued to grow during the year as more athletes earned their letters. September brought the club's first event, the Kickoff Dance, "Kickoff to the Moon."

Monthly meetings under the guidance of president Chris Huffman and sponsor Mr. J. O. Jackson provided the opportunity for planning upcoming events. These activities included timing, keeping statistics, ushering at basketball games, and selling refreshments for the Midlands Wrestling Tournament, which attracted wrestlers from colleges all over the country and over 5,500 spectators. The Mr. Legs contest was held for the second year, to prove, according to club officers, that "there is more to athletes than just muscles."

GAA activities expand, include co-ed volleyball

Motivated by the long-awaited completion of facilities, members of the Girls' Athletic Association participated in new and varied activities. In the fall LT GAA played host to members from area schools at the Proviso Playday. Interscholastic teams in archery, badminton, and tennis were organized to compete in GAA conferences throughout the year.

Intramural activities were expanded to include weight reduction and co-ed volleyball. Ski trips and skating parties offered students an opportunity to use facilities not available within the school.

The Aquarians, the first synchronized swim team, displayed in a show in the spring the results of weeks of practice toward grace and symmetry. Active members and board members were honored at the GAA Banquet in May.

Senior Leaders gain experience by PE teaching

Assisting the gym teachers during and after school, the Senior Leaders took advantage of the new facilities offered by the Physical Education Department. Additional gym space and a new swimming pool made it possible for Senior Leaders to spend extra time after school refereeing in co-rec volleyball or guarding as senior life-savers.

Twice a week the girls in the red shorts met for a leadership class designed to improve their officiating techniques and athletic co-ordination before they attempted to instruct other senior and junior girls in various sports ranging from archery to basketball.

Receiving credit for their class assistance, Senior Leaders tried to enliven each gym period with some of their surplus spirit and initiative while having an opportunity to work with a variety of teachers and classes in several six-week units of study. In the spring, exceptional Junior Leaders with at least a C average in other courses were chosen as successors for the coming year.

Choir of Joy travels to Britain for concert tour

As another step in financing its trip to Europe, the sophomore Choir of Joy oversees the tempting spread of its money-raising bake sale.

The music program for LT Choruses included classes and after-school activities for groups which the directors say grow more talented year by year. Open House gave the Freshman Glee Clubs, which were open to all interested singers, their first chance to perform before an audience. The Sophomore Mixed Choruses and the Sophomore Girls' Choruses performed at open houses and several assemblies.

One of the sophomore groups known as the Choir of Joy decided to tour the British Isles during the summer of 1970. They raised money for the trip through various concerts, a paper drive, a bake sale, and a spaghetti dinner.

At North Campus, junior and senior groups presented the Christmas Vespers and the North Campus Choral Concert, as well as performed for several assemblies. Climaxing months of hard practice, North and South Campus groups combined for the mass Christmas and Spring Festivals.

Choruses provide musical touch to school assemblies

Presenting a wide range of popular and classical music, Choir members adjusted to a busy schedule of performances. During the Christmas season, Choir soloed in two concerts and an assembly, with its traditional debut at Vespers. In order to teach quickly, Director Fred Lawler used ear phones to give correct pitches for each part. The early operetta, Plain and Fancy, included many lead and minor roles for student actors. With only a month to perfect new music, Choir presented contrasting classical and jazz masses for the annual Oratorio. Participating with other vocal groups, Choir gave two spring concerts, ending its year with senior Baccalaureate.

Annually selected from Choir on the basis of a well-balanced vocal blend, Small Choir members sang for several school and community functions. Aided by colorful lighting effects, the ensemble's performance of "Aquarius" and "Let the Sunshine In" at Pops Concert received an unprecedented encore. After participating in several Christmas programs and the Martin Luther King Assembly, Small Choir closed its busy spring schedule with a June concert.

During rehearsal for Plain and Fancy, Martha Cooper's interpretation of a passage draws appraising looks from Barb Sible and Karen Smith.

Practices, drills perfect sound of LT bands

Music from the North Campus, Sophomore, and Freshman Bands resounded throughout the halls this year as they prepared for their public performances. Directed by Mr. Harold Hilgendorf, Mr. Paul Barber, and student conductors, the three bands planned a busy year. Concerts in the fall and spring and the Spring Festival were only part of the schedule; the bands also provided football and basketball half-time entertainment, marched in the Homecoming, Memorial Day, and Pet Parades, and played in pep rallies and local contests.

An upcoming concert necessitates the concentration of each band member during the final rehearsals.

Popular music augments orchestra concert programs

Meeting first period every day in the Vaughan Building with Mr. Paul Barber, Orchestra members from North and South Campus prepared for a year full of concerts, while refining their musical skills. An impressive Pops Concert in early November, two Christmas concerts, and the Operetta, in cooperation with the choir, were the results of these sessions. State and local contests broke the routine and earned awards for individuals and groups. A well-deserved picnic in June ended the year.

Aides supplement curricula, learn office operation

Expanded facilities, requiring more Aides and a knowledge of the new sections of the school, brought greater responsibilities for these student volunteers. Some of them could be seen in the halls during class periods, waving to their friends, delivering multi-colored slips, and collecting cards; others labored in the offices, keeping records and doing the other tasks that faculty members assigned to them. Recruited at registration, aides in the libraries, offices, and multi-media area saved the administration from much physical work while they learned a little about the school and escaped an hour in study hall.

Consistent wins give varsity soccer team state ranking

Equaling the total win of the past four years combined, the Varsity Soccer Team won fourteen games with a final record of 13-2-1. Entering the St. Mel Tournament as favorite, LT lost to a spirited Quigley South and settled for third place. The team scored a momentous victory over New Trier East. With the enviable record of 42 goals and 14 goals scored against them, LT was ranked third in the state and retained the Electro-Motive trophy.

Although the Frosh-Soph Soccer Team finished at an even 4-4-3, Coach Igersol felt that they played better than the record indicates. Their problem seemed to be inconsistency: they won over Maine which had previously beaten them 5-0. Though stressing defense, they had an effective and swift front line.

Season ends with split record for varsity football

Coach J. O. Jackson's Varsity Football Team, largely composed of juniors this year, had a frustrating season, but managed to finish fourth in the conference. Their first game, an exasperating one-point loss to Oak Park, the Number 2 team in the state, was followed by a Friday night game at Downers Grove, where the Lions were shut out 31-0. A temporary uplift gave them enough power to beat York 28-14, but despite the spirit of Homecoming, the team could not overcome the Hilltoppers of Glenbard and lost 16-13. The fact that the next game was R-B's Homecoming spurred the Lions to harder concentration, and they defeated the Bulldogs 34-14. Their winning streak continued to the games with Proviso West, which LT won 40-20, and Maine East, who was beaten 38-12. Hinsdale proved too tough a match in the final game of the season; the varsity Lions lost 22-14 and ended the year with a 4-4 record, despite the fact that they outscored their opponents 200-163.

Summer 500-Mile Club conditions LT runners for fall

With the formation of the 500 Mile Club at the upperclassmen level, the Varsity Cross Country Team conditioned during the summer for their fall schedule. Tough competition in the West Suburban Conference ruled out the possibility of being No. 1 team, and the harriers finished sixth in the conference with a 4-6 record. The boys were greatly encouraged, however, when LT finished eighth out of forth-two teams at the Mattoon Invitational and placed fifth in the competitive district meet. During the season, Coaches Max Armer and James Kilbreth aimed at rebuilding, and they look forward to a winning team next year.

Excelling in the conference, the Frosh-Soph Cross Country Team finished with a 4-1 record. Sparked by first place victories at both the York Invitational and the Conference Meets, the team established LT course and team total records throughout the season. Having five of their top eight runners in the innovative 500-Mile summer conditioning program was beneficial in developing physical endurance and discipline. For the first time in five years, the sophomore team had a winning record, 6-4, which earned them a fourth place rank in final conference standings.

Cagers' undefeated conference record nets WSC crown

With a revamped defense and three all-conference players, LT became a state power in Varsity Basketball this year. In his first season at LT, Coach Ron Nikcevich introduced a pressure zone defense to hold opposing teams in check.

The Lions opened the season by soundly defeating New Trier East, and then overcame highly-rated non-conference opponents Thornton and Homewood-Flossmoor. Four other squads offered little resistance to the steadily improving Lions in the opening conference games. After decisively beating Downers Grove to win the Proviso West Christmas Holiday Tournament, LaGrange became the top-ranked team in Illinois. Back in conference competition, LT continued undefeated to take the West Suburban Conference title.

Marcus Washington, Owen Brown, and Scott Shaw were named by coaches to the all-conference team. Brown and Washington also made all-area teams because of their over-all play. The Lions boasted a 22-0 record at the close of the regular season.

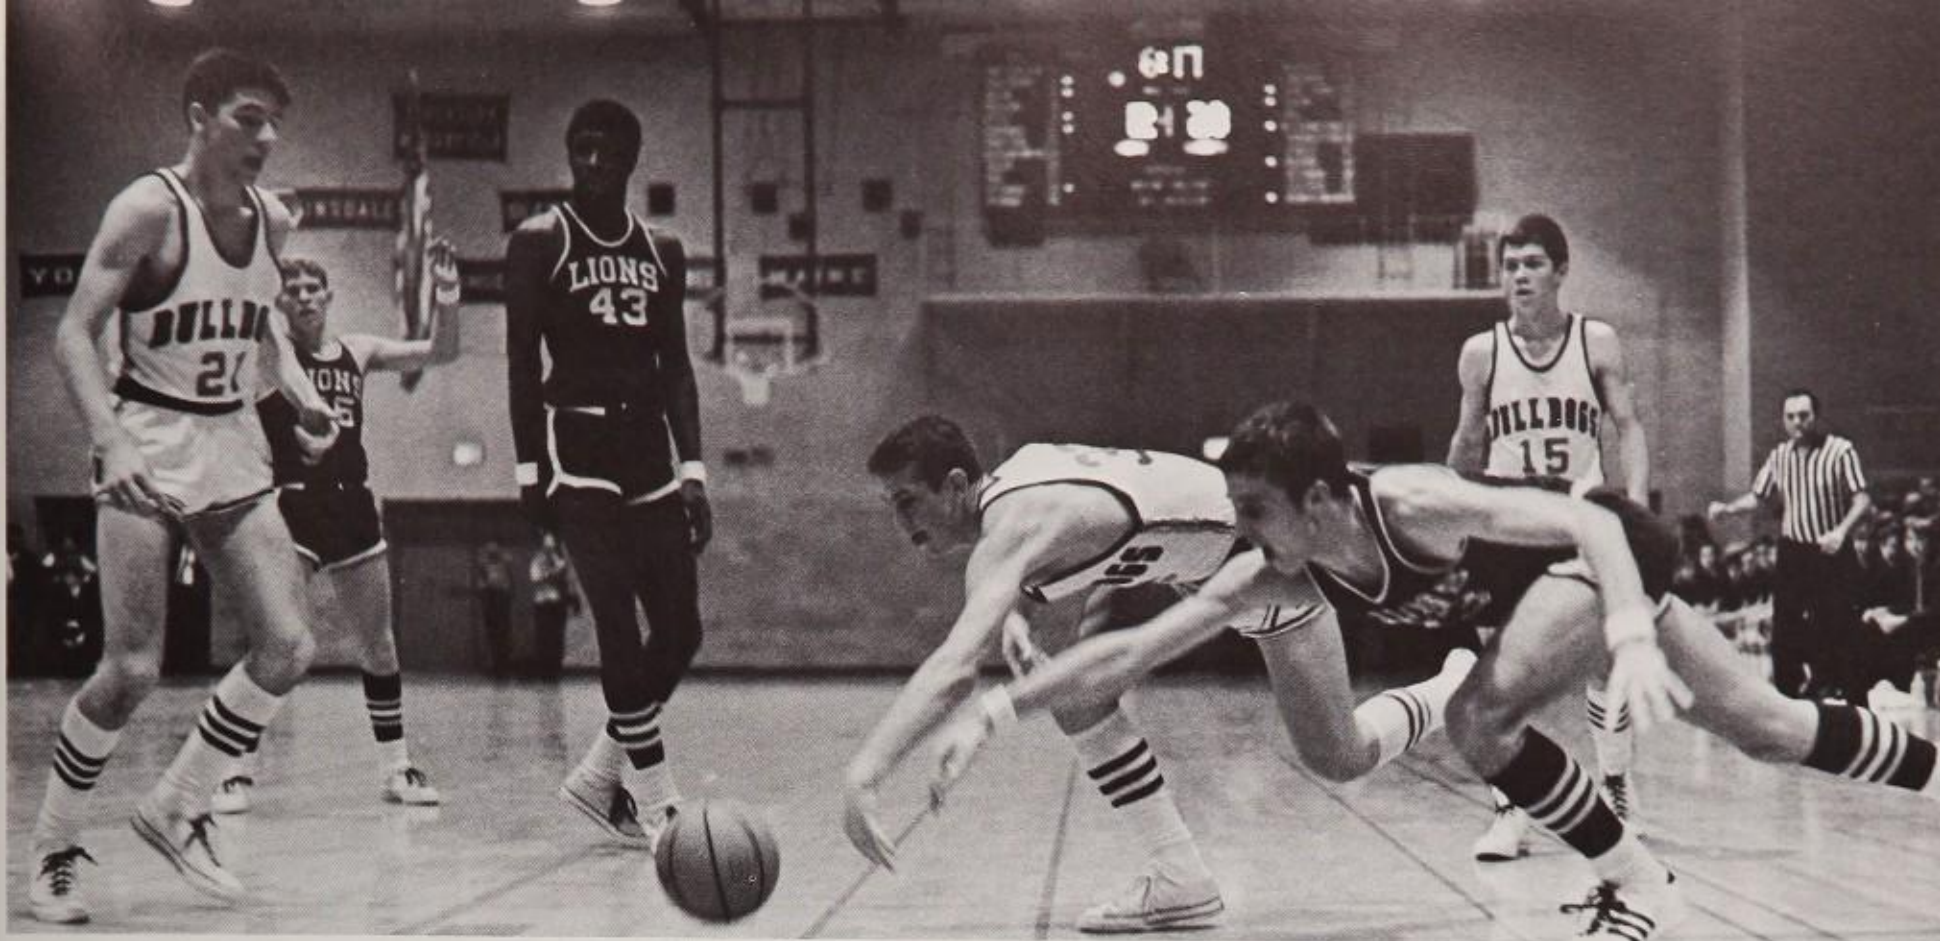

A vicious struggle under the basket results in Steve Heinzelman's loss of the rebound to Thornton star Lloyd Batts.

F-S basketball team scampers past opponents

Utilizing a well-balanced combination of offense and defense, the Frosh-Soph Basketball Team compiled a record of seventeen wins and three losses in the '69-'70 season. Coach Roger Johnson encouraged the use of a man-to-man press which kept opponents' scores down to an average of 47 points per game while the Cubs averaged 61 points per game. Beating two of three teams in pre-conference play, the team continued to win eight conference games and the R-B Christmas Tournament before losing to highly-rated York. The Cubs went on to win four more conference contests until they lost to Hinsdale in an exciting double-overtime struggle, finishing the season with a 12-2 WSC record and a second-place trophy.

We're #1

Sporting a hard-earned 31-0 record, the Lions of LaGrange became only the sixth unbeaten team in IHSA State Basketball Tournament history to capture the Illinois crown.

Rated number one by most area and statewide polls since the start of the 1969-70 season, the Lions became the target of every team participating in the tourney. In the regionals, the team easily beat Sandburg and Oak Lawn, but they had to scramble to down Chicago Christian. The Lions added their second tournament trophy in the sectionals, where they beat Willowbrook and St. Mel. Ending the downstate hopes of another team, the Lions edged Sterling in the supersectional.

Travelling to Champaign's Assembly Hall, the squad had their closest call of the season when they blew a fifteen-point halftime bulge, but held on to down St. Anthony of Effingham by one point. In the semi-final pairing, the Steelmen of Joliet Central failed to prove their mettle, and the Lions advanced to the final game against East Moline. In that contest, it was LaGrange all the way as the Lions duplicated the feat of their undefeated predecessors of 1953.

Led by All-state and All-tournament selections Owen Brown and Marcus Washington, and inspired by Elite Eight Queen Cathy Bryan, the Lions returned victorious to LaGrange, where they were greeted by screaming sirens, a 1600-car parade, and 75,000 wildly enthusiastic fans.

As the final seconds of the 1969-70 season tick away, the chant of "We're Number One!" spreads through the legions of loyal LT fans.

Crowded among hundreds of other decorated cars, one carload of fans practices its yells before the team arrives for the parade.

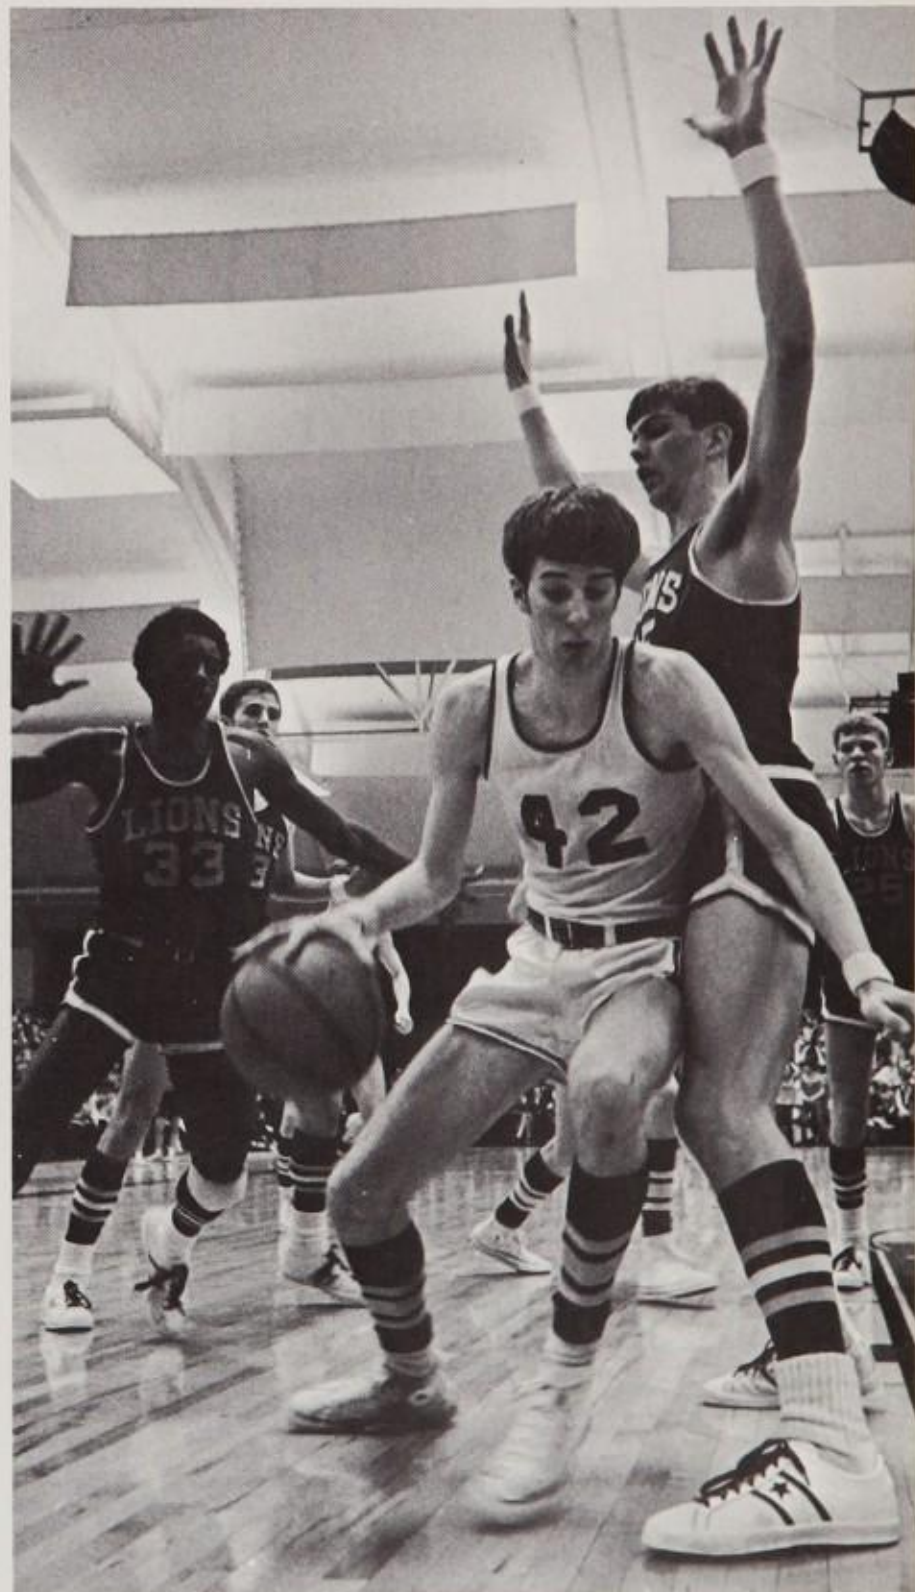

Following the East Moline game, the realization that the Lions have done it brings tears of joy to the LT cheerleaders.

Obviously disagreeing with the referee's decision on a close play, Coach Nikceovich leaps to his feet to protest.

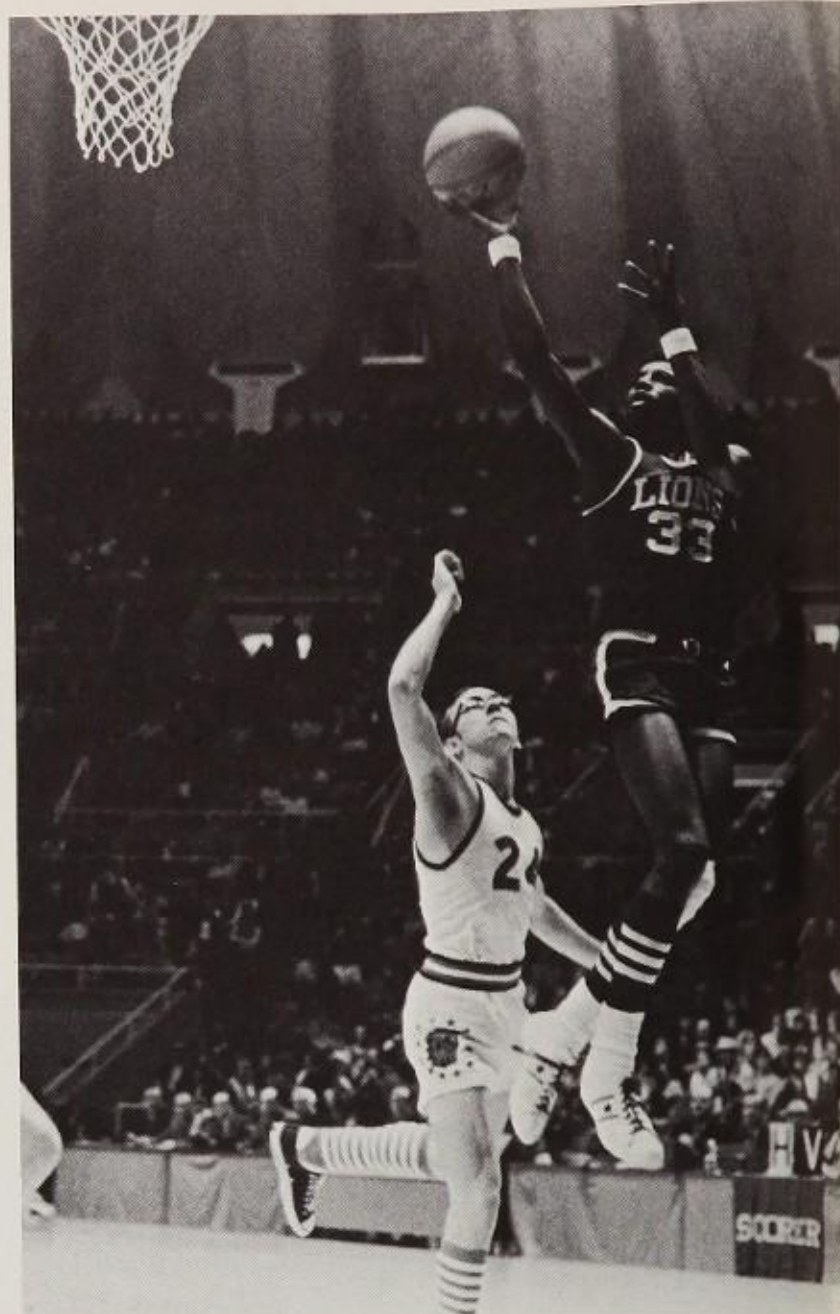

Aware of his important defensive position, Steve Heinzelmenn remains set in place to draw the offensive foul from Sterling center Mark House.

Minutes after the ceremony declaring the Lions state champs, center Owen Brown is interviewed, still clutching the treasured trophy.

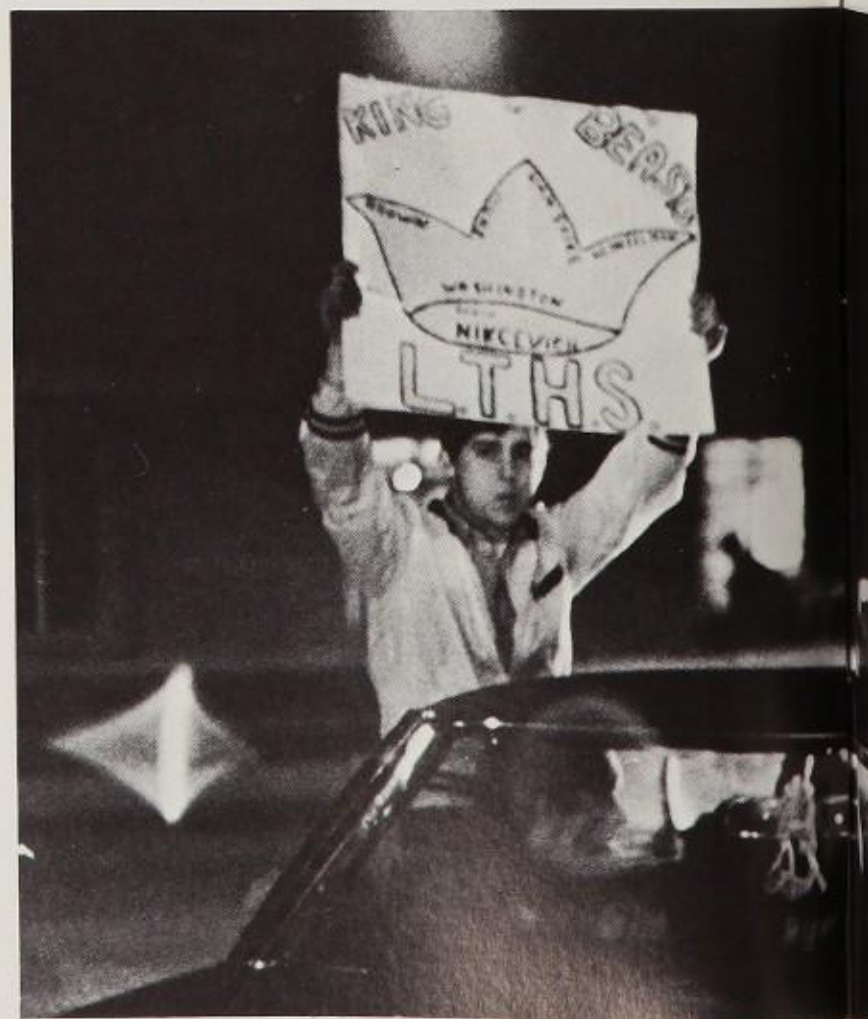

Picked by university faculty judges over seven other girls, tournament queen Cathy Bryan adds to the honors won in Champaign.

Twisting and turning, Marcus Washington drives past St. Anthony defenders for a crucial two points.

In spite of the long trip home, weary yet ecstatic students alarm South Campus at 3 a.m.

7-1 record gives swimmers second place in WSC

Swimming in the shadow of Hinsdale Central, the best high school team in the state and perhaps in the nation, the Swim Teams still completed very successful seasons. The varsity squad finished with a 7-1 record and placed second in the conference during their first season in the new pool. The Sea Lions captured second in the state district meet, qualifying five contestants for the state meet, at which Bill McGowan took an eighth and a sixth place. Varsity coach John Weber foresaw a hopeful future for LT swimming based on the results of underclass teams.

The frosh-soph splashers equaled the varsity mark, losing only to Hinsdale Central in dual meets. Their 7-1 record gave the sophomores second place in the WSC. The freshman swimmers won five dual meets and lost two. They also took first and fifth places in their two invitational meets to complete an impressive season.

Varsity wrestlers grapple for state tournament honors

Winning the conference championship for the seventh time in fifteen years, the Varsity Wrestling squad completed the finest record in its history. The grapplers finished 15-1-1 overall and 7-0 in conference matches. Among the fifteen wins was a first place in the Glenbrook South invitational tournament. In Coach Bert Kraus's final season, his wrestlers dominated the all-conference squad, taking six out of twelve possible positions. Dave Suchomel, a two-time district champion, set a school record for take-downs. Jamie Summerfelt qualified for the state meet and set an LT record of fifteen pins for the season. Andy Eliopulos placed fourth in the state in his weight class.

The Frosh-Soph Wrestling team did not fare as well as the upperclassmen. The sophomores posted a 3-11-1 record for the season. Coach Lew Hansen's most valuable wrestler was John Gorgol, who was undefeated in sixteen matches and pinned a record fourteen of his opponents.

Eight varsity gymnasts advance to regional meet

The Varsity Gymnastics Team, in Coach Ingersoll's words, "had a disappointing season." Finishing with a 3-10 record, the team tied for sixth place in the conference. This standing was partly due to a large number of injuries to gymnasts early in the season and partly to the basically inexperienced makeup of the team. However, a bright spot in the season came with the team's third place finish in the district competition. Eight members of the team qualified for the sectional meet.

The Frosh-Soph Gymnastics Team finished with the best record in their history, 10-3. The season started with several consecutive victories before the gymnasts faced their first defeat. Oak Park, Hinsdale, and York were the only teams to down the Cubs. Though the majority of team members were sophomores, several freshmen strengthened the ranks.

Tracksters prepare for outdoors with fieldhouse wins

LT's only two-season sport, Track, kept essentially the same team for indoor meets during the winter and the outdoor meets in the spring. Besides having ten returning lettermen, the indoor track team was greatly aided by juniors from last year's outstanding sophomore squad. The team finished third in the final conference standings. Coaches James Kilbreth and Max Armer felt this showing was good preparation for the outdoor season.

Outdoor track began with the hope of finishing third or possibly second. The most challenging opponents faced were York, Glenbard, and Main East.

The sophomore team also rallied to a third place finish during their indoor season. In outdoor competition they were threatened by the same teams as the varsity.

Strong pitching key to baseball teams' success

Striving to boost their conference standing from last year's fifth place, this year's Varsity Baseball Team began team practice at the beginning of March. Captain Chris Huffman, together with several returning lettermen and other experienced players, worked with Coach Richard Leiber toward strengthening their pitching and perfecting their hitting techniques. The team's defensive depth and desire to win was instrumental in facing powerful competition such as Maine East and Proviso West.

In order to maintain the level of superiority established by last year's first place ranking, the Frosh-Soph Baseball Team worked at developing hitting and fielding skills to complement the strong pitching ability. With three good right-handed pitchers and a lone freshman southpaw, Coach Robert Burson tried to remain on top.

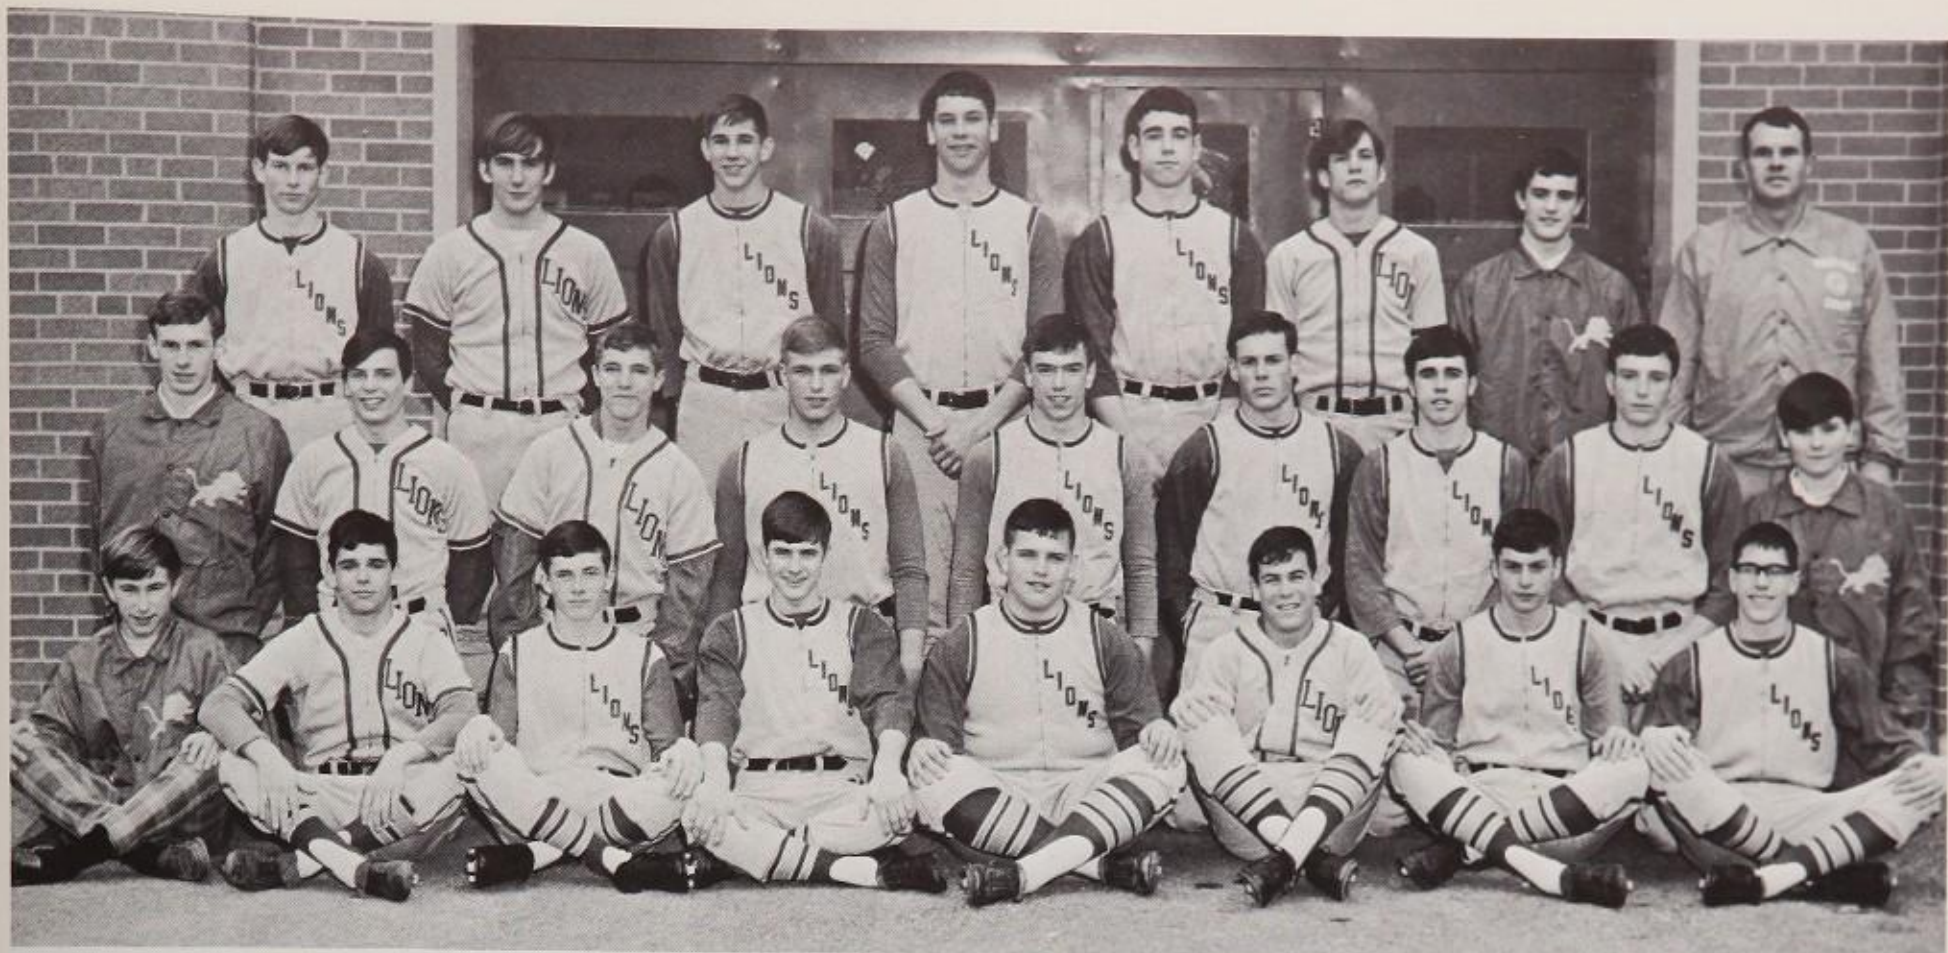

Even though the weather outside may be inclement, batting practice can always continue in the indoor net cages.

Varsity tennis team eyes state championship

Seven returning lettermen brought high hopes to the Varsity Tennis Team for the 1970 season. Six of the seven top players from last year's district champions led Coach Carl Nemecek to believe that the squad would be strong contenders for the state title. Hinsdale Central was seen as the only conference competition; improvement of LT players and graduation of top Hinsdale players furthered hopes for a conference championship. Several Lion netmen practiced during the winter under professional instruction. Indoor practice started early at the West Side Tennis Club. A new eight-team invitational tournament was held at LT in addition to the regular meets at Gilbert Park.

The Frosh-Soph Tennis Team also looked forward to a good season. Four returning players were assisted by several promising freshmen. Coach Paul Nemecek hoped for a conference title, with toughest competition in the WSC coming from Hinsdale Central and Glenbard West.

LT golf teams look forward to successful season

With the help of eight returning lettermen, this year's Varsity Golf Team, coached by Mr. Bert Kraus, felt that it had the ability to at least equal last year's third place finish, and possibly to better it. They expected, however, some rather tough competition from Maine East and the defending champions, Hinsdale Central.

Because tryouts for the team were held in late March, many of the team members took advantage of spring vacation's opportunities for golfing practice in warmer parts of the country. Regular practices were held at the Edgewood Valley Country Club, and all home matches were played at the LaGrange Country Club.

The Frosh-Soph Golf Team, coached by Mr. Art Suchomel, hoped to surpass the previous year's second place finish by making use of experienced sophomores and promising freshmen.

Intramural Board initiates after school sports

Coping with a record participation in the intramural sports program, Intramural Board was created this year to plan activities under the direction of sponsor Mr. Art Sandusky.

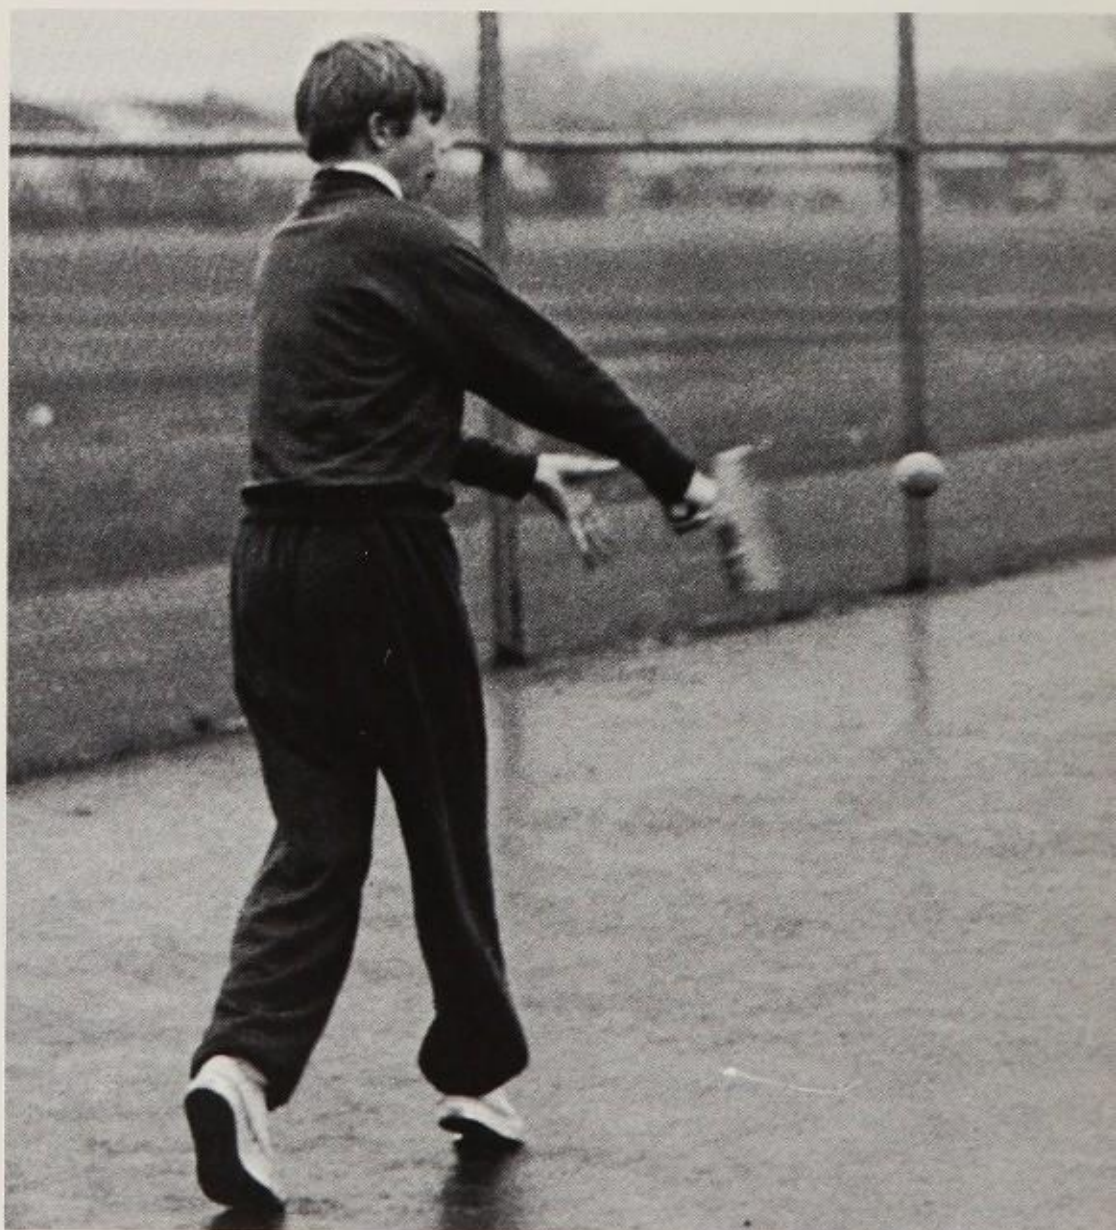

At a meeting in the fall, all boys interested in intramurals selected members of the board and expressed opinions on what they would like to have included in the program. Shortly afterward, the board, which consists of five seniors and five juniors, met to elect officers and outline rules of eligibility. Periodically during the year, the board enacted more specific playing rules for flag football, basketball, and softball. In cooperation with GAA, a co-rec volleyball tournament was also held during the winter.

LT cheerleaders ignite explosions of enthusiasm

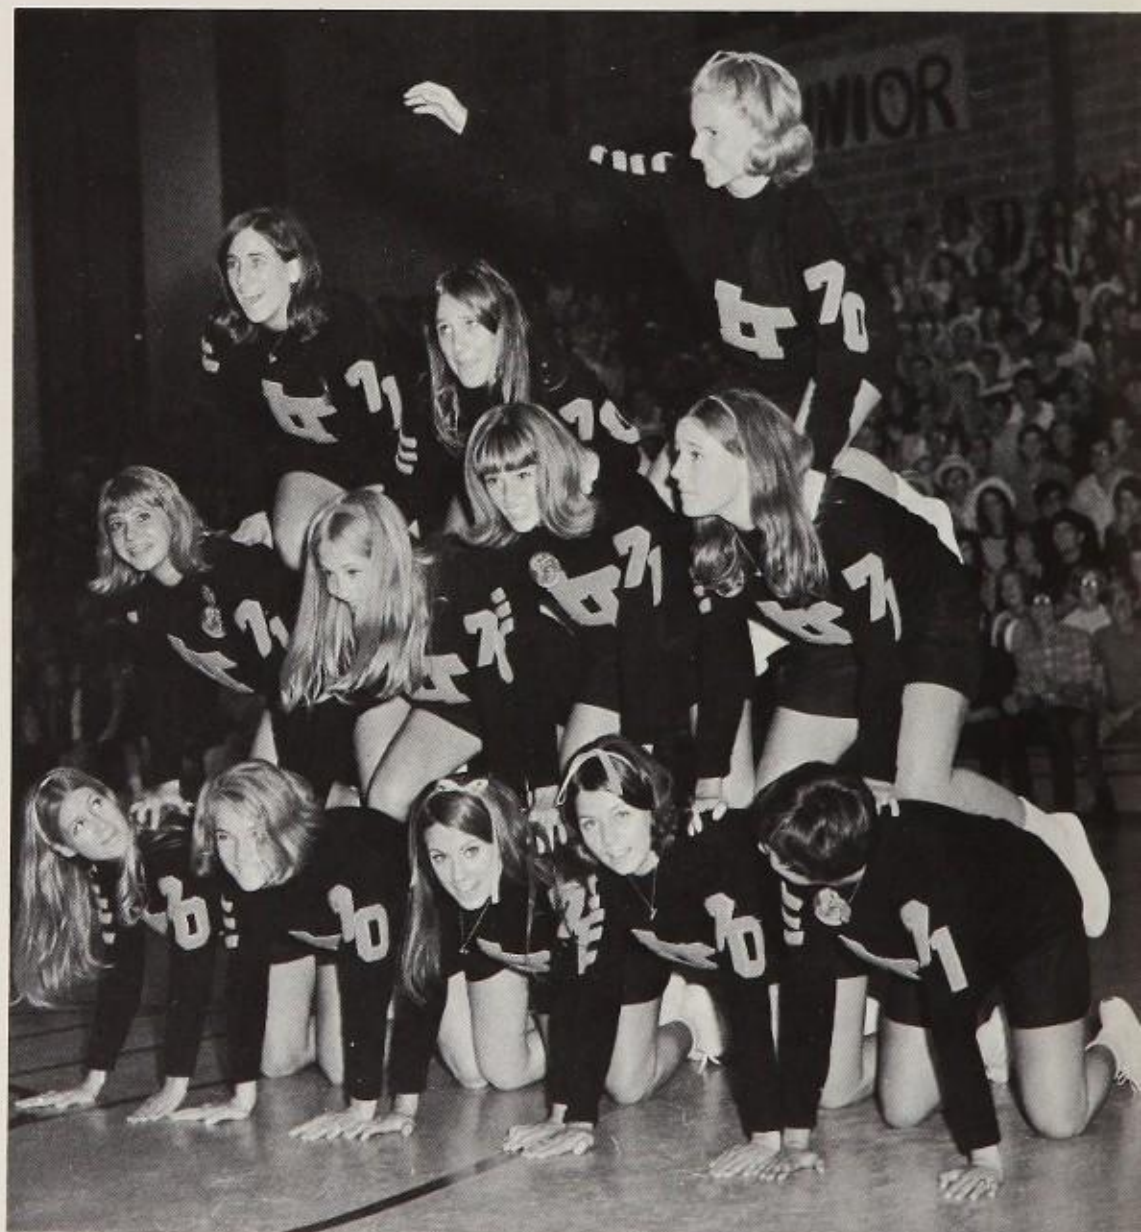

Maintaining a balance between tradition and innovation, the Cheerleaders from both campuses, sponsored by Mrs. Pamela Harding, strove to encourage students to vocally support their teams. Captains Deb Kasbeer at North and Sue Brown at South planned long hours of practicing new cheers as well as the traditional ones, which paid off in an increased student response. Selling football programs and sponsoring a soc-hop after one of the first basketball games helped the girls raise money for needed uniforms. The freshman cheerleaders made their first official appearance during basketball season. A farewell party for senior squad members ended the year for the '69-'70 varsity and frosh-soph cheerleaders.

New uniforms add color to Pom-Pon's half-time shows

In addition to learning their dance routines, the North Campus Pom-Pon Squad, sponsored by Miss Penny Sullivan, demonstrated their sewing ability by making new uniforms at the start of the basketball season. Financial aid for the material came from the sale of shakers and balloons throughout the football season. Captain Teri Wilson created the dances performed at half-time and taught them to the rest of the squad, a process which required four or five nights of practice each week. Several pot-luck dinners were held at members' homes throughout the year.

Continuing to alternate performances with the upperclassmen for the second season, the South Campus Pom-Pon Squad, sponsored by Miss Marie Cikanek and Mrs. Ann Choplin, spent many hours devising, learning, and perfecting dances. Along with the responsibility of originating each routine, Captain Martha Carmody supervised money-raising projects such as the sale of pencils and stickers, and the soc-hop in February. To mark the end of a busy season, the Pom-Pon girls held a special dinner before the last game.

Twirlers, wrestling cheerleaders back teams at games, meets

After hours of work at semi-weekly practices, the Twirlers perfected their intricate routines exhibited during half-time of football and basketball games. They found that the use of flag batons and two-baton routines increased their versatility. Under the direction of sponsor Mr. Harold Hilgendorf and captain Betty Liakos, they also performed in several parades and the state twirling competition.

Cheering for several athletic teams this year, the wrestling cheerleaders renamed themselves the Junior Varsity Cheerleaders. Organized by captain Barb Sible and sponsors Mrs. Harriet Hirschy and Mrs. Nancy Sprague, their cheering schedule covered the entire school year. In addition to posting scores at wrestling meets, they cheered at soccer, j-v football, j-v basketball, and baseball games.

Lionettes, Swim Timers provide valuable assistance

In their second year of service, the Lionettes, sponsored by Mr. James Kilbreth, not only were an added attraction to track meets but were indispensable to the coaches. The girls did all of the scoring, timing, and announcing at the meets, which freed the coaches to concentrate on the team's performance.

The Swim Timers, sponsored by Mr. John Weber, became a necessary part of swim meets this year with the initiation of home meets. Uniformed in navy and white striped T-shirts and navy culottes, the girls volunteered their time to help the swimming program. At the meets, groups of three girls timed each lane so that swimmers would receive the most accurate time possible.

Almost all of you here
have one special teacher or counselor
who is really more a parent or friend:
someone to explain, to complain to,
to make you feel as if there really aren't five thousand here.
In the same way, there seems to be a special class for everyone,
made special by the teacher,
your friends, or the course itself.
Some classes interest you;
others don't:
it depends upon your mind,
on your willingness to be inspired,
but always you learn something,

Administration copes with student problems, protest

In a year when the established was constantly criticized and rebuked, the Administration of LT felt the pressure of student, parent, and teacher groups requesting change. It had to cope with problems arising from the questioning of administration policy by students and teachers, especially concerning the dress code, an open assembly, and underground newspapers. The Student-Faculty Relations Committee was established to ease some of the tension. The failure of the building-maintenance referendum in December was a major setback and caused anxieties concerning such programs as night school and dances as well as building maintenance and repairs.

Both end-of-year and semester exam schedules were changed to meet the desires of students and faculty when changes in the state school code made it possible for schools to schedule days of exams only, with no regular classes. The administration and teachers also debated short term and no-credit courses and resurrected pass-fail system arguments, resulting in some experiments with non-graded classes.

Compared with the issues of concern to all, the day-to-day problems of schedules, systems, and personal counseling seem small, but a school of LT's size functions only because such things are handled smoothly. The new computer center and volunteer workers helped to lighten the work load and provide more time for the important decisions that the administration must make.

Counselors aid students' subject, college decisions

To give each student services not offered in the classroom was the goal of this year's Division of Pupil Services, headed by Mr. Thomas Hansen. Booklets in which seniors collected their test scores and college papers headed the list of new additions to the year's services. New conference rooms enabled the class counselors to better understand each student. Career Day gave upper-classmen necessary facts concerning their fields of interest. Incoming freshmen were met in the early spring as counselors tried to help each student organize his study program.

Conferences with teachers, counselors, college consultant, deans, student activity supervisor, speech therapist, and the testing supervisor enabled students to gain personal recognition.

Whistling softly to himself, Mr. Yena scans the notices on his bulletin board for information about the latest student activities and accomplishments.

English expands, introduces radio, TV, film courses

Many reforms were outlined at the beginning of this year by the chairman of the English Department, Mr. Aldo Mungai. A change in approach emphasized derivation of the English language, semantics, and dialectology to help the student understand his language. New courses considered highly successful were Introduction to Film and Radio-TV Speech, the academic foundation for WLTL. The lack of growth in speech courses concerned the department because of the importance of oral communication in society. Another problem was how to overcome the large classes to give each student individual attention.

Several experimental techniques were developed. The team teaching and independent study programs were expanded; the possibilities of closed circuit television and short term courses were considered.

Two-floor complex houses new idea in school libraries

One of the highpoints of construction at both campuses was the creation of the Library-Media Services, which provided students and faculty with a place to use new equipment singly or in groups.

The South Campus library, which houses 20,000 volumes and 130 different periodicals, introduced to the faculty a technical processing room in which audio-visual materials could be secured and reproduced. The North Campus library was completely remodeled into a two-story structure with two conference rooms, five classrooms, audio-visual and technical processing room, a college and career room, and an international room. Twenty-four carrels and central study tables made it possible to accommodate 364 students at one time. At its fullest capacity, this library holds a total of 65,200 volumes, but for its first year it had 30,000 volumes and 150 periodicals.

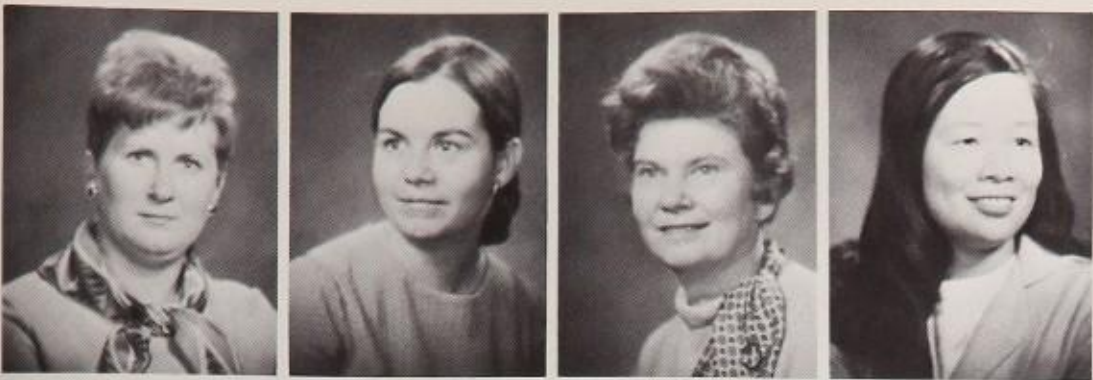

An after-school wait for their bus allows these students to thumb through the periodical rack in the NC library.

Math department experiments with teaching machines

With the growth of science and technology, LT also grew. Directed by Mr. Charles Stegmeir, this year's Mathematics Department added new courses and facilities to its program. Greater interest and better performance by the pupils were the goals of this year's curriculum.

Introduction to Fortran was offered to acquaint students with computer programming. Other courses allowed participants to learn according to their capabilities. The use of overhead projectors in classroom instruction was expanded with the aid of overlays and improved screens. South Campus students experimented with the department's new Autotutor. This machine tests pupil ability by presenting problems on a screen. If the learner's answers are wrong, the "tutor" explains the solutions of the problems. New techniques to facilitate learning were employed at both campuses.

New language labs help toward oral, aural mastery

Both North and South Campus boast old and new facilities for the Language Department. Under Miss Eloise Birney's direction, two new language labs were opened on a flexible schedule which allowed individual teachers to use the labs as often as necessary. Students strengthened their oral-aural comprehension by using the language labs and tape recordings in the classrooms. Through the use of reading materials, films, and foreign newspapers and magazines, language students gained an appreciation of other countries.

In a fascinating summer experience, a group of students toured Russia in the Russian Abroad program, thus gaining further insight into the culture of a foreign country.

With an even greater stress on the spoken word, the Language Department strove throughout the year to give a thorough background to its students.

Physics E course, new SC facilities ease science study

In addition to a new chairman, Mr. Orville Warning, the Science Department has seen changes in facilities, faculty, and curriculum.

This was the first full year that the new facilities have been utilized. Two new chemistry rooms and one biology room at North Campus, and the entire science wing plus the pond area at South Campus were opened. The department welcomed five new teachers to its staff this year and added a Physics E class, a course which approached the subject in a manner calculated to make physics appealing to girls.

Special Education brings help, hope to handicapped

Drawing from the resources of fifty-five schools in western suburbs, the Department of Special Education, under the direction of Mr. C. Lewis Martin, aided the physically and mentally handicapped students in becoming an integral part of LT.

The completion of a new diagnostic center at Cossitt and Leitch Avenues provided a living arrangement for the trainable mentally handicapped. These students spent their time in a home-like situation working toward self-sufficiency. The professional staff also counseled, trained, and found employment for the maladjusted, the blind, and the deaf. All courses were designed to prepare the students for successful and beneficial roles in society.

Social Studies relates to current events

Placing stress on the role played by minority groups in history, the Social Studies Department, headed by Mr. Arthur Sprague, continued its efforts to expand student participation and interest in world affairs. This involvement was stimulated by expanded use of multi-media facilities and materials.

A new course, American Studies, was a part of the team-teaching innovation. The correlation between the history and literature of the U.S. was emphasized through the combination of English III and American history courses. More field trips increased the educational value of classroom studies. Frequent outside reading assignments and individual research projects were additional methods of making the students aware of world problems and their possible solutions.

A lab was made available to those who had obtained a special card.

The courses also included Interior Design and Housing in addition to the ones offered previously in Clothing and Foods. Teachers managed to keep up with recent advances in techniques and services and to prepare their students for futures as housewives and career workers.

Art focuses on specialization, individual freedom

Expansion distinguished the year in the Fine and Industrial Arts Department, headed by Mr. Richard Malone. Added to the North Campus course offerings were Aerospace Technology and Auto Shop. At South Campus, students who enrolled in the Industrial Arts Survey course sampled various aspects of industrial arts. Also making its debut was Household Service, a course designed for girls only.

The art studios, although not completed at the start of the year, housed the fine arts department which experimented with a new system allowing each student to focus on his particular area of artistic interest. The previous curriculum was enlarged to include such fundamental courses as Art Foundations and such specialized courses as Painting, Jewelry, Textiles, and Photography.

Business trains with computers for modern jobs

Through the addition of several new courses and the acquisition of new facilities, the Business Department was able to prepare students for vocation and further an understanding of the business world. Pupils, with the use of new calculators and data processing machines, were able to explore the fields of distributive education, business machines, business math, and clerical typing. The department, with Mr. Carl Nemecek as chairman, strove to keep up with new procedures and techniques.

Music department's new courses stimulate interest

Through band, orchestra, vocal work, harmony, and new enrichment courses, the Music Department, headed by Mr. Harold Hilgendorf, provided a variety of entertainment, as well as musical education. The department's principal goal was improving general performance by concentrating on individuals and small groups. Students expressing interest in contemporary music developed the recently formed Folk-Pop Singers course. For those attracted to the fundamentals of harmony and composition of music, the Song Composing course was created. Team teaching, introduced in Vocal Techniques, aided each student in solo-singing. Highlighting the music year were state contests, the Christmas Festival, and the Spring Festival, in which individual and group talent were combined for public enjoyment.

Add swimming, co-ed gym classes to PE curriculum

New facilities vastly expanded activities in the Girls' and Boys' Physical Education Departments. Six weeks of swimming for all juniors and seniors was the major change in curriculum. Seniors and sophomores participated in co-ed activities in gym classes.

The girls' department, led by Mrs. Bonnie Glick, offered new activities at every class level. For the first time, senior girls enjoyed a partial choice of activities. Under Chairman Lester Glick, the Boys' Physical Education Department increased intramural sports at both campuses. A schedule under which the field house was in use nearly every week night provided two nights of free play for students. Regular gym classes continued to promote physical fitness as well as an appreciation and understanding of sports.

Industrious service personnel keep LT operating

With substantial size increases at both campuses, the Service Personnel continued to work diligently to give every possible service.

Secretaries untangled the schedules that computers and pupils had confused, in addition to typing and filing.

The cafeterias were supplied with good, inexpensive, although sometimes unappreciated food by the kitchen staffs. Overworked and underpaid, with problems complicated by the unsuccessful referendum in December, the custodians continued to clean up after littering students. Maintenance workers at North also contended with the debris left by construction, working shifts between regular classes, night school, and all special events.

It should be said that these are the people who run this school, the only ones without whom nothing could be done; and they are rarely appreciated.

Every time your name appears in the school records,
it is followed by class numerals.
You and that class are united;
but, to believe that you
are part of the class,
you must experience

and the same joys
as the rest of the class.

The school organizes class spirit
through pep assemblies, elections,

but organization alone
won't bring class spirit;
it takes the experiences like
false fire drills, group tests,
finding your way in new halls,
defending your class against others,
and, in the end, graduating —
it takes experiences like these,
experiences absorbed by living in the school
six hours each day,
to build any spirit
in your class or school.

Homecoming float: first challenge for spirited frosh

Being a member of the Freshman Class at LT has never been easy, but the circumstances of the times have made it even more challenging. Sifting through many of the old ideas and emerging with a spirited, united class required a willingness to listen and an ambition to learn. One of the first undertakings was the elections of Class Board members and officers, representatives for Student Council and the Girls' and Boys' Clubs. The class was enthusiastic in supporting their first LT Homecoming, and looked forward to future projects such as Freshman Class Assembly and the traditional Frosh Party. With the experience of class sponsors Miss Diana Ryskiewicz and Mrs. Mary Cerveny, the freshmen were able to contribute some services to the school and also increase their class treasury.

Basketball games enlivened by '72 cheering section

No longer beset by the problems of adjusting to high school life, the Sophomore Class returned as leaders of South Campus. Serving as guides at Orientation Day provided the sophomores with their first opportunity to direct the freshmen.

Under the inspiration of Kathy Sible, '72 president, class activities and participation were focused on increasing student interest. At meetings early in the year, Homecoming plans were discussed. Concerned class members were able to release their creativity in designing and building "Barn'em and Bail'em," the class float. Soon after, distribution of yellow and kelly green class buttons furthered the sense of spirit and unity among '72ers. The class party, held early in the spring, proved to be its usual success. Class activities ended with the election of class officers and club representatives, who will carry the class through their junior year.

Newsletters relate activities, ideas of '71 class board

The Junior Class began the year with a complete reorganization of their class board format. Membership, which was open to all interested juniors, was twice that of the previous year. Under the supervision of Rick Shepro, president, and advisers Mr. Paul Guyer and Mr. Kim Cusack, the members formed four special committees: a constitution committee, a special projects committee, a social committee, and a regulations committee. These groups initiated the class projects for the year. Periodically throughout the year, a newsletter was printed and distributed to the entire junior class to inform them of activities and projects being carried out and to serve as an outlet for expression of student ideas. The Homecoming float, "Lions Run the Show," and the junior class assembly were typical examples of the enthusiasm which the Class of '71 generated throughout the year.

SENIORS

Senior year,
usually the best year
for those who have survived:
now you are the rulers of the school;
you have time for the things that you want;
you can take some classes you want;
now you have only one year to go.
But now you must decide what future you want;
(how often have you been told that?
and how often have you changed your mind?)
now you must make some choices —
college? job? marriage? draft?
You still are bothered by smaller things like selling Christmas cards,
or running Student Council, or getting a three-buck an hour job,
or going downstate.
And so you go on for that final day
when the diploma is handed to you — funny how hard you worked for that paper and sometimes you wonder about its worth —
and you leave eleven hundred others,
many of whom you never knew,
and you take with you:
one education, one diploma,
memories good and bad, some friendships.
And you're on your own
to do with these things
whatever you want.

The hands of the clock
change slowly,
like every change
that has been waited for;
but time is one of the things
that you can trust,
that you can believe in.
The other thing is
yourself.

Acknowledgments and credits

The staff of the 1970 Tabulae thanks these individuals for assistance, cooperation, and advice above and beyond the call of sanity: Mr. Roger Wyckoff and the staff at Wyckoff Studios, especially Mrs. Lynn Finn, Mrs. Mary Ann Kramzer, and Mr. David White; Mr. James Bull, the area representative for American Yearbook Company; Mr. John Pacholski, our tolerant custodian, Mrs. Lucille Finkenbinder, Miss Bernice Sherry, and Mr. Roy Latimer of the school staff; Paul Petersen, Rick Watts, and Mr. Stan Younger for splendid candid photographs; The Citizen, Suburban Life, and Little Trib newspapers for sports candid; Ed Paulson for the use of his car and wit, while they lasted; the typists who wandered in and were put to work; and patient mothers and families throughout the western suburbs.

Dear Kathy

It's getting closer & closer to June 2, and boy, it's sure getting me! You & Colleen have been my first & best friends here at L.T. and I'll never forget
you. (You better not forget me!) Your friendship was vital for me in getting through 3 years of Machugans at L.T.

I hope you'll be happy at Indiana U next September. (After 21 days in (?) Europe, who wouldn't I.)

Anyway, be sure to visit me this summer,
and I (+Chuck) will come up to visit
you real soon.

Love (your twin sister)

YOU'RE A SMART CHICK:
advice

DON'T LET THE DEAD HEADS
SPOIL YOUR LIFE. SEEK OUT GOOD FOLKS & HAVE A GOOD TIME.
LOCK AN' ALL, Kathy

Kathy -
You have got to be the most sensible person I have ever met in my life. I really admire you for that. I also want to say thanks
for letting me ~~be~~ get to know you - Thanks!

Good luck (say in Indian!)
be sure to keep in touch!
& always Good Bye!
Love, Joe Barber

To Kathy:

Well, another year
has gone by and we've been able to be together -
probably for the last time before our close lives
part and we go off on our own two separate ways.
What else can I say?
Maybe we'll see each other at college! I hope your future
is successful!
in no matter
what you do.
Please,

Kathy,
Well, I guess we have proved that this is a small world. Good luck in college.
I don't know Dacting
you better. Love luck
Prabhu / Odu ayala

Kathy
good luck
in Indiana.
Sorry I didn't get to know you a little better. Good luck always and ever
Linda Bray

Kathy

It's been a great year for all of us; I hope it will continue thru the years after you leave.

Love,
Chuck

Kathy Kelly
You were one of the first people I met
way back in Freshman year, remember?
That was sure a long time ago.
Happiness to you always.

Love,
Marion Ludwig

always be close enough for me to be with you
when I want, K?
Love from your closest friend friend who also happens to be your sister
